PM Mulls Replacement As Turner Quits Politics

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner, often touted as a future prime minister, has quit the federal government to "return to private life."

Public Works Minister Bud Drury has been sworn in as acting finance minister.

Prime Minister Trudeau, emerging from a lengthy cabinet meeting, said the resignation "came as a surprise" and he accepted it "with deep regret." He said he had not yet decided on a successor to Turner.

Trudeau said a new finance minister would have to be appointed before the House of Commons convenes next month.

"He will be difficult to replace," Trudeau said.

"I haven't shuffled the cabinet yet so I don't know who the new finance minister will be," Trudeau said.

Turner has been unavailable for comment since the pending resignation was first reported Wednesday. But the prime minister told reporters following a cabinet meeting that Turner's decision was not based on a policy disagreement.

The resignation of the 46-year-old Turner comes at a time of continuing new surges in both unemployment and inflation in the country.

There have been persistent reports of differences within cabinet on economic policies.

Some cabinet colleagues have said Turner wanted to take a more direct, tougher stance on fighting inflation, perhaps even pay and price controls and reports that he might pack up politics were sometimes seen as a way of strengthening his hand in cabinet.

On the other hand, some say, he might simply be anxious to leave politics for a time and take up a new challenge. At 46 he could afford to step aside and build up another reputation while keeping a determined eye on the office which Trudeau shows no signs of vacating at the moment. And any international agency, or even a private law practice, would offer fewer dangers than the politically precarious finance portfolio.

Officials of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) say Turner's resignation will almost certainly leave the fund's key policy committee without a chairman, at least temporarily.

SPACE-AGE SPIES ALONG BORDER

TORONTO (CP) — An array of space-age devices will be installed along both sides of a section of the Canada-United States border next year, forming an electronic security screen 450 miles long.

Purpose of the screen will be to help authorities catch any terrorists trying to reach the Olympic Games in Montreal via the U.S.

A source close to the situation in Washington said a team of customs agents knowwn only as The Group, is mapping out a program "covering everything from traffic to terrorism," to be co-ordinated later with Canadian security plans.

One U.S. customs official said his department is "very reluctant to talk about this thing," and that even he did not know the number or make-up of the group.

He confirmed, however, that radar-scanning light aircraft, turbo-powered helicopters and sonar-fitted patrol boats are in the plans for border security.

U.S. spotter aircraft already are equipped with Vietnam-developed Forward-Looking Infra-Red — for night operations, he added.

He could not confirm that electronic sensors, also designed during the Vietnam conflict to detect movement in remote areas, would be planted along the critical 450-mile stretch from Buffalo, N.Y., to Derby Line, Vt.

"But we use them along the Mexican border and it doesn't stretch the imagination to suppose we'll be using them up there."

Execs Marked For Murder

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Sandra Good, a disciple of jailed mass murderer Charles Manson, said today an "international people's court of retribution" has marked for murder scores of business executives whose firms damage the environment.

Miss Good, 36, is the roommate of Lynette Fromee, another Manson follower who was indicted by a federal grand jury here Wednesday for the attempted assassination of President Ford.

In an interview in her apartment, Miss Good gave The Associated Press a list of about 75 names of persons she said were marked for death. She identified them as executives primarily in the power, lumber, oil, food and chemical industries.

The list did not include the names of six Louisiana, Texas and Georgia businessmen that Miss Good previously had told a reporter would be assassinated.

Miss Good told Bob Ruby of New Orleans radio station WWL in a telephone interview that "assassinations are necessary since people are asking for trouble by hurting the earth and from what they are programming on television."

Miss Good gave The AP a statement saying: "The International Peoples' Court of Retribution is a wave of assassins. It is made up of several thousand people throughout the world who love the earth, the children and their own lives. They have been silently watching executives and chairmen of boards—and their wives — of companies and industries that in any way harm the air, water, earth and wildlife."

She said the wives of executives who are marked for death are being watched.

"They can be assassinated on the golf course," she said.

Asked who the assassins are, she said, "They're underground."

Asked who would order the killings, she said: "They

Woods Meet Hinted

Speculation abounded today that the provincial government will call a top-level meeting of negotiators for forestry companies and three unions aimed at ending the current contract disputes.

But two union leaders said they are "baffled" by government hints of new moves.

Premier Barrett, questioned as he entered a cabinet meeting this morning, would neither confirm nor deny the speculation. Labor Minister Bill King had no comment.

Barrett said Wednesday he was hopeful "new initiatives" in the dispute could lead to a settlement. But he declined to specify what the moves were or where they originated.

He made that comment after asking reporters to step outside his office for a brief moment while he consulted with King. The labor minister declined comment then saying it was "too delicate at this stage."

Reg Ginn, president of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, said he knew nothing of any meeting.

"We have had no invitation, no correspondence, no communication with the premier or labor minister," he said.

The chief negotiator for the forestry companies, Don Lanskail, was at a meeting this morning of his committee to consider an IWA request for resumption of direct negotiations.

Through a public relations spokesman, he said he knew nothing of a meeting with Barrett and King in Victoria and was planning to leave for Penticton this afternoon to attend the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention.

About 13,000 members of the two pulp and paper unions went on strike July 16 to back proposals for a $1.50 an hour pay hike in a one-year agreement. They turned down $1.55 an hour over two years.

Province in Decline . . . Before Wood Strike

Even before the forest industry strike began, 12 of the 18 major economic indicators in the province were in decline, according to a report released today by the department of economic development.

The report, covering approximately the first half of the year, shows a sharp decline in housing starts, crude oil production, copper shipments, lead shipments, zinc shipments, timber scaling, lumber production and plywood production.

Smaller declines were evident in building permits, natural gas production, molybdenum shipments and farm cash receipts.

The only real strength in the economy was in coal shpments which totalled 5 million tons for the first half of 1975, up 33 per cent from the same period in 1974.

Retal sales were up 9.2 per cent in a period when inflation rose 11.4 per cent, leaving no real net gain.

Total factory shipments to the end of May was $3 billion, up only fractionally from $2.9 billion in the same period of 1974, for an increase of less than one per cent.

The other three economic indicators to show increases were fish landings up 11.2 per cent, pulp production up 4.5 per cent and paper production, up 1.6 per cent. The increases in pulp and paper came at a time of heavy buying in anticipation of the strike, which began July 15. Lumber production has been affected marginally by the dispute and directly by production curtailments by major forest companies.

The economy is believed to have gone into further decline since the period studied in the present report, as a result of the labor troubles in the forest industry. Fish landings are also expeced to show a sharp drop in later reports because of the strike in August at the peak of the season.

Housing starts across B.C. in May totalled only 7,100, down 35.5 per cent from the 11,184 in the corresponding 1974 period. In the urban areas, housing starts during the first six months totalled 9,575, down 29 per cent from the first half of 1974, according to a preliminary estimate.

Export and import tonnages were down sharply at Vancouver for the first five months of the year. Exports totalled 13.3 million tons, down 19 per cent from 16.4 million tons, while imports reached 2.5 million tons, down 12.2 per cent from 2.8 million tons.

NEWS BRIEFS

Gouging Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 40 persons have complained of price gouging during the labor dispute that has closed 125 Vancouver-area supermarkets, Jackie Watt, a spokeman for the Food Prices Review Board, said Wednesday. Mrs. Watt said there were 30 complaints Tuesday and 10 more on Wednesday. Board inspectors are investigating.

Spelunkers Trapped

GRENOBLE, France (UPI) — Six British cave explorers were trapped today in a "death cave" in the Vercors Mountains by an underground flood that killed two of their French colleagues, police said.

U.K. Train Crash

LONDON (UPI) — A crowded commuter train from Epsom Downs plowed into an empty train a mile short of King's Cross Station today, injuring more than 50 passengers.

Soviets Urge N-Ban

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI) — The Soviet Union today proposed a complete ban on nuclear weapons tests to ease world tension and move in the direction of world disarmament. Soviet Ambassador Yakov Malik relayed the request by presenting a letter to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim this morning asking the nuclear ban be included on the agenda of the 1975 General Assembly session opening Tuesday.

Pollen's Attitude Mellows Toward Municipal Meeting

As an instrument for improving the lot of local governments in this province, the Union of B.C. Municipalities hasn't improved a great deal — in the opinion of Mayor Peter Pollen.

But Victoria's mayor has apparently mellowed and is less inclined to criticize the organization than in years past.

In a telephone interview from Penticton today, where he is attending the UBCM's 72nd annual conference, Pollen said: "It's about the same as it always was, except that after six years (two as an alderman and four as mayor) one starts to look at it through slightly more tolerant eyes."

He said some useful things are accomplished by such conferences, although this year there are again some "rangy-tang" resolutions up for discussion by the delegates.

One, for example, suggested the provincial government set the annual salary scale for council members in each municipality. "That was shot down because of its intrinsic absurdity," Pollen commented.

Pollen said the address to the conference Wednesday by Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer was "so inocuous it was an embarrassment."

Although there are about 100 provincial government representatives at the convention, the mayor obviously doesn't expect much to be achieved either through their formal participation or through informal discussions on the city of Victoria's problems.

"These guys carry the party line so hard and fast that it's rather useless trying to talk to them," he said.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer told delegates he is opposed to the terms of an amalgamation resolution endorsed by the UBCM which calls on the provincial government to poll the residents of each community to be included in an amalgamation.

Nanaimo was the latest city to amalgamate with surrounding improvement districts. The amalgamation vote was taken from the entire area rather than the separate communities involved.

Lorimer said persons in areas close to municipal centres want services but they don't want to pay for them and will therefore vote against amalgamation.

MONKEY HIPPIES DRIVE ZOO WILD

CAIRO (UPI) — The case of the hairy monkeys has ended happily at Giza Zoo.

Zoo keepers and a veterinarian could not understand why a pack of monkeys in an outdoor exhibit has ostracized three young male members and later "launched a wild biting and clawing attack on them," the newspaper Al Gomhouria said Wednesday.

They rescued the monkeys and discovered that unlike the others, the victims had unusually long hair.

"On the assumption that this might have stimulated the aggressive behavior in the others, the doctor trimmed the hair and then put them back in the reserve," the newspaper said.

"On their return, the three were accepted by the others in friendly fashion," Al Gomhouria said.

4% RENT CEILING?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Tenants Organization suggested Wednesday that allowable rent increases for 1976 be limited to a maximum of four per cent.

The announcement at a news conference by spokesman Bruce Yorke followed an earlier proposal by the Rental Housing Council of B.C. which wants allowable rent increases to reach 28 per cent after nine months next year and 135.5 per cent within five years.

"Our independent studies show that 10.6 per cent allowable increased for 1975 was excessive of actual cost increases and cannot be justified," he said.

KING MISQUOTED

Due to a typographical omission in early editions of Wednesday's Times, Labor Minister Bill King was incorrectly quoted in a story concerning the forest industry labor dispute.

In the last paragraph of the story King was quoted as saying: "I think the economic test in trade union bargaining should revert to the stage of virtual starvation."

In fact King said "I don't think the economic test . . ." Although the labor minister had made his position clear in the paragraph preceding, the Times regrets having inadvertently misquoted him.

75 Island Pulpworkers on Welfare Rolls

At least 159 families of striking pulp workers are receiving social assistance, nearly half of them on Vancouver Island, Resources Minister Norman Levi said Wednesday.

At a news conference called late in the afternoon, Levi said that were 75 cases in the Island district, which includes Powell River, out of a total caseload of 5,300.

In addition there were 34 in Prince George and 50 in Vancouver. Figures for other areas, such as Prince Rupert which has been heavily hit by the dispute, have not been tallied.

He said the total number of cases represented an "extremely small percentage of all welfare recipients."

Levi said social assistance would be available to anyone in need whether the breadwinner was involved in a labor dispute or not.

"We have to make it abundantly clear that in the final analysis, we are not prepared to allow women and children to starve," he said.

He noted the policy was consistent with that followed by the department since 1970 when Phil Gaglardi was minister of rehabilitation and social improvement.

Then, however, he said, the Social Credit government's intention was to keep secret the fact they were issuing welfare benefits to strikers.

Levi produced a directive sent out June 4, 1970, that instructed regional directors of the department to pass on verbally to district offices the notice authorizing the issuance of food vouchers in situations where the striker was "absolutely destitute."

The directive concluded with a statement that nothing about the policy was to be placed in writing.

Levi said the only difference between the former administration's policy and his own was that "we had the decency and administrative good sense to put our policies in writing."

William Hamilton, president of the Employers Council of B.C., said Wednesday he could not see any justification for such welfare payments except in the most extreme cases of hardship.

There is not a more difficult situation to comment on, he said, but when a labor dispute escalates to a strike or lockout it is "economic warfare."

"The employer as well as the employed is faced with financial hardship" he said.

Mayor Art Phillips of Vancouver said the government's decision to allow the strikers to get welfare if they are destitute "will be difficult to police.

"Because the department (human resources) is administratively so bad I have little confidence in their ability to do a proper job.

"It is pretty far-fetched that some of these people are so destitute in a month. What this amounts to is that the government will be bailing them out of personal problems."

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said the situation is "another example of the government's failure to come to grips with labor-management problems in B.C."

Mail Strike Delay Until October 10

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Postal workers Wednesday angrily denounced an extension given the conciliation board dealing with the union's contract dispute.

The extension would delay and postal strike until Oct. 10.

Postmaster General Bryce Mackasey expressed "surprise" at the anger of postal workers

He said in an interview that a good conciliation report would provide "a good basis for a settlement" but that the board needed time to prepare it.

The conciliation board was given until Oct. 3 to prepare a report on the contract dispute involving the 22,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

A legal strike by the postal workers cannot begin until seven days after the conciliation board report is presented to the public service staff relations board which handles disputes between the government and its employees.

CUPW chief negotiator Jean-Claude Parrot said the three-week extension was granted "without the consent of the union" which would "make every effort to get the report issued earlier."

Mackasey said it was not really an extension. Judge Jean Moisan of Quebec Superior court simply needed time to deal with the very complex unresolved issues still remaining in the contract dispute.

"If it takes two or three weeks to come up with a good conciliation report," he added, "then we have a good basis for a settlement."

The postmaster general said he could not understand why the union was "miffed" at the time allotted.

The CUPW represents inside postal workers — mail sorters and clerks. It has a representative on the conciliatin board just as the government has.

The union wants the right to negotiate technological change, a 30-hour work week and pay increases of up to 70 per cent over one year.

The union pay demand is for $3.26 an hour more over a one-year contract. The government is offering raises totalling $1.15 an hour in four stages over 32 months.

In his statement Wednesday Parrot accused the government of "stalling" the negotiation and conciliation processes.

He said government stalling had made it harder for the conciliation board to submit a report in the initial time allowed up to Sept. 9.

. . . WHAT A PLACE FOR A ROBBERY

VANCOUVER (CP) — A travelling man spent the night alone and naked in a Vancouver cemetery after he told police two men robbed him of his clothes, his knapsack and travellers' cheques.

The embarrassed victim, James Bergh, 28, who would not give his hometown, had nothing left but his boots and a possible broken jaw when he sought help from a resident near the cemetery.

He said he met two men in a beer parlor Wednesday and they said they would drive him to a hostel.

Instead, they stopped their car at the cemetery, beat him and threatened his life and stripped off his clothing. They also took $400 in traveller's cheques, $70 in cash and his passport.

Save the Redwoods, Squeaky Tells Judge

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Lynette (Squeaky) Fromme, charged with trying to assassinate President Ford, was ejected from a federal courtroom during her arraignment today after she demanded that the judge "save the redwood trees" and told him, "The gun is pointed, your honor."

Miss Fromme, clad in the red "nun's robe" she has worn in dedication to her leader, convicted mass murderer Charles Manson, repeated, "The gun is pointed." Then she told the judge, "Whether it goes off is up to you."

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas MacBride, presiding over the arraignment, ordered her removed from the courtroom when she refused to stop a rambling dissertation on the need to save redwood trees.

She was taken from the courtroom without entering a plea to the federal attempted assassination charge.

At today's proceedings, the judge tried to discourage Miss Fromme, 26, from speaking out, telling her she might prejudice her chance of a fair trial.

At one point she said the people's court has nothing to do with the Charles Manson "family", but at another point she said: "Manson must be given a seat in the United Nations."

The names on the list ranged from some in Sacramento with home addresses to single entries such as "all automobile companies" and "General Electric-nuclear plants."

In an interview with AP Radio, Miss Good said that executives of any company which destroys the earth, water, trees, air or wildlife are potential targets of assassination.

She said she was "simply warning these executives" that they must stop destroying the earth.

She said executives of "Exxon, ITT, Standard Oil, Union Oil, lumber company executives, Gulf Oil, must get out of the country or you'll be killed . . ."

"We want to live, you maggots, you monsters. Get out of the country or you'll be killed."

Business Seminar Scheduled

A half-day seminar for small and medium sized businesses will be held in the morning of Sept. 25 by Toronto Dominion Bank.

The seminar, organized by Philip Pepin, manager of the main branch of the TD Bank in Victoria, will deal with the location and use of new capital and will be conducted by George Fells, who specializes in the field of small business financing. He is president of SB Capital Corporation.

The sessions begin at 8:30 a.m. Sept. 25 at the Century Inn and conclude at 12:30 p.m. with lunch.

ROYAL NAVY DROPS ITS BELL BOTTOMS

LONDON (Reuter) — Two pieces of clothing traditionally worn by junior ratings in the British Navy — bell bottom trousers and a black "silk kerchief" — have been abandoned in favor of more modern dress.

Bell bottom trousers, 25 inches in diameter, go back to the days when sailors made their own uniforms, and it was easier and less wasteful to use a whole width of material.

The black silk kerchief worn around the neck, is often thought to have originated as a mourning symbol for Admiral Nelson, and was tied around the brow to prevent sweat from running into the eyes.

A defence ministry spokesman said a new uniform would include trousers flared from the knee and vertically creased, and would incorporate "a number of improvements."

The noon to 5:30 events will feature a 4-H lamb show, horse shoe pitch, vegetable and flower displays, a beer garden and a gun display by the Malahat Mauraders.

Another highlight will be the lamb and salmon barbecue and there will be a TOPS convenience tent.

There are no fees or forms for the displays but entries should be at the Helgesen farm by 10 a.m.

Saanich still hasn't called a meeting of its Heritage Advisory Committee and no one knows if there are official appointments to it or whether it has a chairman.

The Hallmark Society, in its news letter announcing the annual meeting, says acting municipal planner Gil Laurenson said he will call the committee together "when there is something to discuss."

"Presumably that something will be a pending disaster, by which time a demolition permit will already have been applied for and it will be too late, again, to do anything but weep over another loss of heritage."

The letter cites the allowing of the destruction of the Hudson Bay Company's log and stone residence of William Fraser Tolmie in the 1960s.

The annual meeting will be held Wednesday in the Princess Louise Room in the Empress Hotel starting at 8. Nominations are still needed for executive positions.

Guest speaker is James Nesbitt who will discuss heritage preservation.

The James Bay history project has resumed after the summer recess by members of the James Bay New Horizons.

Anyone interested in learning more about Victoria may join the project doing research, interviewing, photography, typing and taping first hand accounts from pioneers. Contact for the project is Louise Iverson.

At the Friday forum at 10 in the James Bay United Church Hall, Bill Barringer, editor of Monday magazine, will be the guest speaker.

The first major fund raising event of the year for Prospect Lake area residents, the annual Fall Fair and Silver Ball Carnival will be held Saturday, Sept. 27, at the community hall from 11 to 3 p.m.

Put on by the community association there will be baking tables, white elephant sale, sewing, crafts, produce and plant sales. For the youngsters there will be a fish pond, carnival games and races.

The committee is interested in getting donations for the stalls and these may be left at the general store or by calling Iris Peterson at 479-7600 or president Pat Harkness at 479-4065.

The association has also dropped the bi-weekly bingo games because of the lack of volunteers.

"The need for the games has been fulfilled with the paying for of the hall," said Harkness.

The association will now be holding four bingoes in the year with the first scheduled for Oct. 11.

It will be several weeks before Ottawa will make a decision whether to purchase the Winifred Clarke Centre for the use by Downtown-Blanshard residents as a recreational and crafts centre.

Lou Jordison of the Blanshard Tenants Association told a meeting of members this week "it's at the Ottawa level as to whether they finance it or not."

In other business the group is applying for LIP funds for seven workers to run a recreational program for the children. The tenants rent the Blanshard school gym Monday, Wednesday and Fridays for use by the teenagers.

This year the use of the gym will be restricted to children 6 years of age and up. "This is the area of greatest need . . . it's the older children that need somewhere to go," said Jordison.

Also discussed were various fund raising projects to keep the programs going.

The Royal Oak Lions Club, as part of Multiple District 19, Lions International, is helping survivors of the drought and famine in Chad, Africa, to build a healthier future through a Care-Medico project.

With district Lions donations, thousands of rural villagers in the developing nation, one of the hardest hit by the drought, will have access to medical care never before available, by building and equipping rural health centres.

Officers installed for this year are: president, Doug Crosby; first vice-president, harvey Mossop; second vice-president, Fred McEvay; secretary, Kelly Waite; treasurer, Dave Campbell; lion tamer, Reg Thomas; tail twister, Ed Copeland; one year directors, harry Hoskin and Len Trelar; second year directors, Ed marshall and Rip Kirby.

VIC WEST N.I.P. MEETING

Vic West residents will have an opportunity Oct. 1 to go over the final plan for the use of Neighborhood Improvement Project funds. Vic West and James Bay are sharing $2 million in NIP funds and the plan will go before Victoria council before the end of the month for consideration.

Kay Woods, chairman of the committee, said "we hope to inform and stimulate the residents and they will be able to see the finished proposal."

The community has been meeting for more than two months with a Vancouver consultant in coming up with plans for a community centre and other projects.

"He (Arthur Slipper) has done a great job and we are very happy with his ideas," said Woods.

The Oct. 1 meeting will be held in the Vic West school gymnasium.

Student Say In Park Plan

Students at George Jay elementary and Vic West High will be approached to see what they want included in Stephenson Park when it is rehabilitated.

At a meeting of the Fernwood Community Association this week members decided the children should have a say and a committee was struck to determine what is needed in the park on Gladstone Avenue.

The association is also applying for a Local Initiatives Project grant to clean it up and landscape.

Community worker Brian Lewis is to look into the obtaining of a bookkeeper. It was pointed out the books as they are now kept are too complicated and an accountant is willing to train one of two handicapped persons willing to do the job.

Peggy Bridges was elected treasurer to replace Don Lewis who was doing the job on an interim basis.

That's the advice given members by residents of the Fern area who are feeling the impact of bulldozers levelling homes in their area by a developer.

A Fernwood member said two real estate agents have been in the area recently going door to door offering concrete prices for homes.

A committee was struck to look into any move by developers and to question city hall on any plans they may have for the area.

The meeting was told "that unless we fight now we'll be bulldozed out of here."

In regard to Fernwood being declared a Neighborhood Improvement Project area Brian Lewis said city coordinator Frank Burn will be at George Jay school next Wednesday at 7:30 to outline the project and to answer any questions from residents.

Lewis said it's not too late for the residents to have input into the spending of almost $1 million in funds and that the city proposals are only that, proposals to obtain the funding from the senior governments.

Paul Phillips said "the community should design the basic plan and the city tinkle around the edges, not the other way around" as it appears now.

The More Things Change . . .

Once upon a time, news that British Columbia's unemployment rate had touched 9.2 per cent would have touched off a storm of indignation in certain political circles in this province. Not so long ago, even the existence of unemployment levels lower than 9.2 per cent was cause for agitation, calling press conferences and demanding that something be done by the provincial goverment.

Yellowed newspaper clippings of the summer and fall of 1971 tell of one politician's campaign on behalf of the jobless in B.C., when the unemployment rate was under eight per cent. The winter before the unemployed of British Columbia numbered a "record" 8.5 per cent of the work force.

The politician first called in August that year for a special session of the provincial legislature to consider the threat of high unemployment. The subject must be dabated, he said, and the government must lay out its plans to ease the problem. A month later, the proposal was repeated in more urgent tones.

It was now "imperative" that such a session be held because of the "gnawing insecurity" brought about by U.S. monetary policy and the threat of heavy winter unemployment.

"Instead of politicians standing up and jawing and pointing fingers at each other, the problems should be answered here in the house."

He kept up the attack in November, challenging the government to call an election on the issue of unemployment, on its "failure to provide work for the people of B.C." A promise to create 25,000 new jobs was "pathetic," according to the politician.

Needless to say, no special session of the legislature was called, and no snap election was held that winter. Instead, it came 10 months later and the politician — name of David Barrett — was elected premier of all the people.

His new government tackled the problem of uenmployment, undoubtedly. The loss of several hundred jobs at Ocean Falls and several thousand at Prince Rupert was prevented with the government's acquisition of two pulp and paper operations. A B.C. Development Corp. was established with $25 million capital to loan out to new, promising ventures. Small businesses got some tax breaks. The government itself embarked on a civil service hiring binge.

But today, four years after Barrett took after the Social Credit administration for tolerating eight per cent unemployment without doing anything about it, B.C. has nine per cent unemployment.

Despite three years of NDP government, chronic unemployment remains. If W. A. C. Bennett was responsible for it in 1971, then Dave Barrett is to blame in 1975.

NDP supporters are sure to say that things have certainly changed. They have — unemployment insurance benefits now are quite generous, for one thing. But the central problem remains. Chronic unemployment not only impairs the economy, it has far-reaching social effects as well.

What has happened to society when we accept meekly that there are jobs only for nine out of every 10 individuals actively seeking work? Suppose the rate goes to 15 per cent? Do we get alarmed only when it hits 20 per cent? Or is the depression-era high-water mark the time to push the panic button?

The Barrett administration is working on a range of projects which will help to diversify B.C.'s employment base — now dependent heavily on natural resources — such as a steel mill, oil refinery, copper smelter, opening up the northwest, but these are all years and perhaps decades down the pike.

Short-term job-creating programs are necessary now, and the provincial government bears a major share of the responsibility for devising them.

". . . unfortunately, he's unemployed . . . but you wouldn't believe his wages, if only he could find an employer who could afford them . . ."

JAMES RESTON

Kissinger: Faithful in a Fashion

NEW YORK — Almost everybody seems to have a complaint about American foreign policy these days — often with good reason — but the critics have a problem. For no nation in the world, despite Vietnam, has been more generous or imaginative in trying to deal with the intractable problems of the world than the United States, and the Ford administration's critics have so far put up no better alternative.

Kissinger's latest effort to buy peace in the Middle East, and his appeals at the United Nations for the poor and hungry nations are only the latest symbols of Washington's yearning for a new world order.

Like all his predecessors in the U.S. state department since the last world war, Kissinger has been searching and reaching for compromises between the political realities on Capitol Hill and the political imperatives in other countries.

Could Be Destroyed

Cordell Hull tried to ease the conflict between nations with his mutual trade concessions. General George Marshall tried to rescue western civilization with the European Recovery Plan. Dean Acheson worked with Lord Maynard Keynes for a new world monetary order at Bretton Woods, and with David Lilienthal and Bernard Baruch for the control of atomic energy at a time when they saw the dangers of atomic war.

Often they were too sudden, too idealistic, too dominant and presumptuous, but in these last 30 years one thing has been fairly clear — America tried in those days more than anybody else to perpetuate in the United Nations the ideal she rejected in the League of Nations.

Kissinger has been attacked as a "big power" man, obviously more interested in Washington's relations with Moscow and Peking than with the United Nations in New York, and with his personal relations with Sadat in Cairo and Rabin in Jerusalem, but back of all his shuttles and tactics with the political big boys and the press he is still reaching and manoeuvring for the old ideal.

Year before last, he proclaimed "the year of Europe," and appealed to the NATO allies to co-operate in dealing with the political and economic problems of the world. At that time, he thought of this as an offer of a new Marshall Plan to Europe.

Later, he suggested that the industrial powers combine to deal with the energy crisis, and offered an American plan to share energy and American technology to create new sources of atomic and solar power.

At the United Nations, Kissinger has been appealing to the developing nations for a new partnership with the industrial nations.

"Let us get down to business," Kissinger said.

"Let us put aside the sterile debate over whether a new economic order is required or whether the old economic order is adequate. Let us look forward and share the world before us. Change is inherent in what we do and what we seek. But one fact does not change—that without a consensus on the realities and principles of the development effort, we will achieve nothing."

CAPITOL HILL

. . . Kissinger in trouble with congress

Kissinger is in trouble in Washington, not only with congress but with his own conservative colleagues in the Ford cabinet, who think he is too sympathetic to the appeals of the developing nations for "a new economic order" and a redistribution of the wealth of the world.

He has paid more attention to the conflicts of the Israelis and the Arabs in the last year than he has to the larger problems between the rich and poor nations of the world, or even between the problems of the rich and poor and the unemployed in the United States, but he has stuck to what he regards as the greatest potential problem of war in the world in the Middle East, despite the objections of congress.

In the end, he will probably win on Capitol Hill because he is almost the only man in Washington who has a clear vision of what he wants. He wants an interim agreement between Egypt and Israel. He wants time. He believes that as long as his friend Sadat endures, there is just a chance that Sadat will reconcile the Arab nations into accepting a peaceful and permanent relationship with Israel.

Big Power Man

It is quite a gamble. Kissinger is betting everything on Sadat, and on his own promises to try to deliver almost $3 billion of aid to Israel, and to put American technical observers along the communications lines in the Sinai. But the gamble will probably pay off, for despite all the criticism of Kissinger's tactics and policies nobody in Washington seems to have a better alternative.

Kissinger could easily be destroyed in these conflicts between Sadat in Egypt, Rabin in Israel and the other Arab states, who have not been parties to the Middle Eastern interim agreement. He could also be cut up in a divided congress at the beginning of what promises to be a savage presidential campaign, but his consolation is that he feels he is in tune with the American effort of the last generation to find a better alliance in the West, a better understanding with the Communist powers, and a new relationship with the poor nations of the world. He may not make it, but he has defined the problems of the age probably better than anybody else, and in the process he has been faithful to the central American policy of reconciliation in the world since the last world war.

MAURICE WESTERN

Gillies Berating a Tory Mule

OTTAWA — The struggle for the Conservative succession has been, up to now, a hesitant, lacklustre, distinctly un-Conservative contest of personalities, labels and bush-beating. Now in the Toronto speech of MP Jim Gillies comes a signal that this is about to change. There is at last the prospect of a fight about fundamentals, which would certainly be more exciting and much more in accordance with the party's modern tradition.

Even if a strong desire existed for a well-mannered, bloodless convention, it is difficult to see how a bruising battle could now be avoided (or why it should be avoided). After all, what's sauce for Gillies must be sauce for Jack Horner. It is no bad thing for a party in opposition to be forced to face realities. After their traumatic experience at the 1967 convention, the Conservatives, far from falling apart, gained according to all the indicators of popularity, until a new situation was created by the emergence of Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

There is much truth and some irony in Mr. Gillies' criticisms of his party. It is to be observed, however, that some of them have no necessary connection with his central theme.

Needs Rapport

For example, it would be difficult to argue that voters, who almost accepted Robert Stanfield in 1972, rejected him in 1974 because he was a former provincial premier. Gillies, considering his academic background, is also a trifle careless with his party facts. It is not true that, over a period of 40 years, the Conservatives lost only when they were led by ex-premiers. They lost very convincingly under Manion, whose background was impeccably federal.

What Mr. Gillies has to say about Quebec is also quite unrelated to his central criticism. It may also be unhelpful since, in effect, it diverts the party from an important reality. For while it is mathematically possible, although difficult, to win with minimal representation from the French province, a victorious party must also govern — and govern effectively if it is to have much claim on the future.

To be successful, it needs more than a few ministers and MPs, owing election perhaps to transient discontents. It needs a continuing rapport with a community representing one-third of the country and it is not likely to achieve this if it starts by writing off the importance of a Quebec base.

Nevertheless, there is substance to the main criticism. The Conservatives have been too unco-ordinated and undisciplined to impress voters as a credible team. This was particularly harmful during the last election when numbers of them (conspicuously including Gillies) appeared to be in disorderly retreat from Stanfield's basic program of price and income controls.

The Conservatives fail, according to Gillies, because "they are not a party" but a collection of individuals with no central philosophy. Little beyond a common dislike of the Liberals holds together members whose views range across the spectrum. They lack professionalism and structure, they are badly organized in Parliament, they rely on ad hoc decisions, members are without authority and responsibility, the caucus suffers because there is no grassroots organization to keep it in tune with popular currents.

It would seem from some of these strictures that the Conservatives are remarkably like the very successful Liberals who long ago consigned philosophy to the libraries although they seem latterly to have found a platform substitute in vaguely socialist sentiments about the redistribution of wealth.

JIM GILLIES

. . . started a hot debate

In contrast to the managerial Liberals, however, the Conservatives have no reputation for professionalism, discipline and organization. They scarcely trouble to conceal their differences. Their policies too often are patched up and incoherent. They confuse troikas with teams and make the lives of their leaders throughly miserable.

But matters, surely, are not quite so simple as Gillies suggests. In effect, the Toronto member berates a mule for being a mule. If the Conservatives are mulish and wayward, the pertinent inquiry is why. Only part of the answer, it seems to me, is to be found in the quarrels of the 1960s and the Diefenbaker populism of the 1950s. Much else can be attributed to that great Liberal gift of this century, big government.

The attraction of power constantly tempts the Conservatives to transform themselves into another Liberal party, in which case voters will have an organizational choice and little else. But there is always resistance from rebels, old, new and ex-Liberals, who want the party to be different, less disciplined, less managed, less professional, less establishment-bound than the ruling Liberals. If big government cannot be repealed, at least they wish to curb its growth. At risk of being less fashionable, they would prefer to be more conservative. In adapting to fashions, the party is in any case at a disadvantage. How can the Conservatives hope to compete with a government which benefits from the Niagaras of "input" pouring from a vast bureaucracy, task forces, commissions and innumerable consultants?

Since the country at election time does look for a credible team, the excessive democracy of the Conservative caucus is doubtless an overall weakness. But it may, paradoxically, also be an element of strength in parts of the country. For there is obviously widespread distrust of the big government with which the well disciplined Liberals are identified. If Horner is short of admirers in suburban Toronto, how well would Gillies (even a better disciplined Gillies) do in Crowfoot or in a number of other constituencies, whose voters tend to be as wayward as their members are reputed to be?

More Conservative?

It is clear, however, that if the Conservatives are to be a serious alternative, they must achieve a better performance. The Gillies thesis is a challenge to debate, not a search for middle ground. In fact, the Conservatives could make themselves much more credible without becoming carbon copies of the governing Liberals. They have been too undisciplined, they have been too inclined to go off in different directions, some of them have been too unwilling to bury old grievances. Their structures, whether well divided or not, have failed too often to yield results in coherent policies.

The country in its present mood might also be impressed with a Conservative party more consistently given to conservative attitudes and resistance to schemes leading to ever bigger government (and taxes). It is interesting that in the present Ontario election, all the parties seem to have drawn the same conclusion from the signs and portents. The Liberals, who in many ways are at a disadvantage, have apparently decided that their best chance lies in the most conservative appeal they have made in many years.

There is much to suggest that, with more conservative policies, Stanfield would have succeeded in 1972. It is conceivable that such a mood could create another favorable opportunity in 1978. The problem may be to exploit it and the Conservatives will have difficulty in doing that if they spend the interval in attempts to outbid the greatest spending government in the nation's history.

An Early Election

The NDP government likes to think of itself as a party of social change and it is indeed that. With its all-out support of the unions and its avowed intention to eventually unionize all labor in the province, it has created a situation where it is possible for young people to work only part time in supermarkets and earn enough to keep them in comparative luxury while old people on retirement and old age pensions live on the brink of poverty. This then is the new equality.

It may be pointed out that the NDP has tried to help old age pensioners. This is true even though there isn't much mention of the fact that the federal government is paying the greater part of the shot, and rising food costs are wiping out what little help the elderly have received.

If this socialist government were really democratic — working for the greatest good of the greatest number — it would disallow all but cost of living wage increases. There are more people living in this province who are non-union than union and every time a big and powerful union wins a large wage and benefits increase, the money comes out the pockets of the rest of us. This is creating a new class distinction with all the old hatreds.

With a small portion of help from the federal government and the world-wide economic recession, this government has managed to destroy the mining industry. The forest industry, helped by unreasonable demands by unions, can safely be allowed to destroy itself.

With the awful example of Britain before us, how is it possible for socialists not to see that more money in the pockets of a selected few will price our goods right out of world markets with a resulting loss for every person living in this province, union and non-union alike. Where are the union leaders who aren't afraid to stand up and tell their membership they are cutting their own throats?

Labor Minister Bill King has said he wants a return to effective bargaining without resort to mediators. This is a strange statement for a minister to make when mediators have been appointed in disputes with crown corporations such as ICBC, which has now, of course, defeated itself. With a change in government, private insurance companies would no doubt be allowed to compete putting ICBC in an uneconomic position due to enormous wage costs and ever-increasing bureaucracy.

An early election, where we can all at least express an opinion, seems to be called for. — Marjorie Stewart, North Vancouver.

Something of Value

The Times of Sept. 5 contained a letter to the editor saying twice as many attend church as sports on Sundays in America.

A letter in the next column gave cases of greed, and lack of scruples by individuals organized groups in society.

Both writers it seems would like to see society benefit by truth and Christian principles. May I make three observations: (1) Churches are not teaching doctrine that will improve society, or (2) People are not learning correct principles, or (3) both — neither correct principles are being taught, nor learned. Might I suggest to all seeking truth and a better society that they investigate the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints? — Philip Wade, 441 Montreal Street.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of September 11, 1915

MONTREAL — Sir William Van Horne, general manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway and later vice-president and president of the CPR, died today at the age of 72. He had been ill for more than two weeks in hospital, where he had gone for an operation on an abdominal abscess. Commented The Times: "The story of how he carried the great transcontinental railway to completion, surmounting many obstacles that would have daunted a less resolute man, is familiar to all Canadians."

Chile Terror: A Civilized Society Destroyed

By HUGH O'SHAUGHNESSY
London Observer

SANTIAGO — As General Augusto Pinochet celebrates today the second anniversary of his overthrow of the Allende government, the people of Chile are suffering as they have never suffered before. Like the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, terror, hunger, mass unemployment and the big propaganda lie range over the land, destroying the fabric of civilized society.

Far from letting up after two years DINA, the government's terror machine, is becoming more sophisticated in its methods of interrogation and torture, its activities aided by the nightly curfew which is still in force, and there is no protection from it.

In various centres up and down the country, like a clinic near the British Council in the centre of Santiago, DINA devises ever more extravagant treatment of prisoners under the command of Manuel Contreras, an old Army friend of General Pinochet, and his aide Osvaldo Romo, alias Commandant Raul.

One of the relief agencies last week showed me sworn evidence from a woman detainee, supported by the sworn medical evidence of a doctor who examined her after her release, which shows how far the treatment has gone. The woman testified that she had been seized by plainclothes men on the streets on July 8 and taken to what appears to have been a Air Force base.

During her first interrogation she was forced to strip completely. She was simultaneously violated anally by a man and sexually attacked by a woman. In her second session she was again made to strip, her legs forced apart and she was subjected to the attentions of a swarm of mice. She was released in a few days with no charge brought against her.

The Chevrolet 10 Vans of DINA still circulate—adding to the approximately 90,000 arrests and kidnappings which have taken place over the past two years.

Even at the simplest level of day-to-day life, fear of arbitrary arrest and torture has bitten deep into every class of society. During last week with a group of well-known journalists and former politicians in a fashionable part of Santiago, I saw the company freeze as there was a sharp knock on the door near midnight. It was the daughter of a neighbour on an errand, but for a moment we all thought it was another raid.

At the bottom end of society, the poor are at the mercy of any member of the armed forces who cares to pull his gun on them. A priest in one of the poorer parts of Santiago told me he had had to spend several days arguing to obtain the release of a man arrested after a dispute with a policeman over a game of football and an air force private who drew his gun on a crowded parish dance and allowed no one to leave till he had recovered what a pick-pocket had stolen from him.

In every university classroom, the staff believe, there is at least one government informer and opponents of the government are convinced that bugging is widespread.

Gen. Augusto Pinochet (centre) with members of ruling junta

This reign of terror is allowing the government to impose on the country, in the name of extirpating Marxism, a rigid and primitive capitalism which is not just bringing terrible hardships on the weakest, but is also failing completely to halt inflation or increase production.

Prices are continuing to roar ahead, wages are strictly controlled, the unions broken and Chile is in the middle of an enormous slump. Hunger and malnutrition are now affecting hundreds of thousands of Chileans. Last Wednesday, a newspaper carried the story of 15-year-old Lilian Vazquez Pomari, chosen to represent Chile in an international table tennis tournament. She collapsed during a training session and confessed she had not eaten for two days. There was no food in the house because her father had had no work for five months.

I visited a soup kitchen just outside the capital where a group of volunteers with money from the churches, the international charities and some foreign governments are running a lunchtime meal for some of the most undernourished children of the neighbourhood.

'It's terrible work,' said one of the volunteers, 'we've got enough to give 120 children between eight months and 10 years old a rough meal of vegetables and sometimes a little fruit, but there is a long list of those we can't take on to our register.

'We have to turn away any child whose father is lucky enough to have a job. In many houses around here the standard diet is a piece of dry bread and a cup of tea without milk or sugar, and every day we have mothers coming to us begging for bread.'

As I left she showed me the cart her helpers had built for trips to the central market to beg for vegetables to eke out the children's soup.

Hunger is hitting even the middle class. A former university professor and his wife who went abroad on a fellowship for a few months earlier this year came back to find their children, too, eating dry bread. The money they had left behind was insufficient for the basic necessities.

Since Allende's overthrow the price of bread has risen 131 times its original price, sugar 164 times and cooking oil 136 times.

At the beginning of the year the United States dollar bought 1,800 escudos; now after nearly 20 devaluations it is worth 6,100 escudos. The highest value banknote in circulation, 10,000 escudos, is worth little more than 50c, and one gives as a tip in a cafe a sum of money which only a few years ago could have bought a wardrobe of clothes.

Later this month the junta is going to change the currency from the escudo back to the peso. The new peso, however, will be worth only one-millionth part of the former peso which was withdrawn from circulation less than 20 years ago.

According to an independent economic survey, industrial production fell by almost a quarter in the 12 months up to last April. Economists expect 800,000 of the country's four million workers to be without a job by the end of the year.

As the anniversary of the coup approached, the propaganda machine has redoubled its efforts to hide the truth and silence all criticism. Today, General Pinochet was to inaugurate the "eternal flame of liberty" in front of the Moneda Presidential Palace destroyed by the Chilean Air Force jets two years ago. The press in general is self-censoring, TV is under government control and those radio stations which don't toe the line, such as Radio Balmaceda, have censors sitting outside the studios.

The junta continues blaming all foreign criticism on international Marxism to which, in its view, have fallen victim everyone and everything from the United Nations to the New York Times and Harold Wilson. In the schools, history has been rewritten with a thoroughness worthy of Germany in 1938. Children are being taught to believe in the invincibility and essential benevolence of the military. Teachers have been ordered to demonstrate in favour of the junta today.

The prospects of change seem remote. The overwhelming military power of the junta is sufficient to crush any challenge and the government is supported by Washington. ITT's comfortable Carrera Hotel in Santiago is full of carousing U.S. Air Force personnel wearing the badges of the current joint manoeuvres 'Operation Unitas' and mottos pledging U.S. solidarity for Chile's defence.

The government is slowly attempting to build up its civilian support into a Movement of National Unity which will give it some political backing. The largest political party before the coup, the Christian Democratic Party, is deeply divided and still under the leadership of ex-President Eduardo Frei, who effectively encouraged and welcomed the coup.

Despite combative press communiques from them there is no evidence that the far left is in a position to mount a guerrilla campaign. The Communist Party is trying to maintain its organization and is keeping its powder dry.

The sufferings of Chile are certain to go on for many months to come. On the parade ground of the military school here, under the pale spring sun, cadets in field grey uniforms practise the goosestep for this month's victory parades.

DO GOV'TS NEED MORE WORKERS?

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

The chairman of the federal Public Service Commission offers us the cheerless forecast that the army of civil servants at all levels of government will go on growing and growing . . . and growing.

This, John Carson explained during a TV program, is because people will go on demanding more and more government services to help them cope with their increasingly complicated society.

There is an all-too-familiar arrogance in Carson's viewpoint that should be challenged at once. It is the assumption that only politicians and government officials are capable of unravelling the knots and tangles that appear in people's lives.

Often as not it is the demands of government that create complications and frustration. Ask any small businessman who has to use battalions of clerks and accountants to feed paper and money to government departments and their regulatory agencies.

The fact is that Canada is a heavily over-governed country. Carson's bland view that it got that way and is bound to get more so because Canadians demand more and more government services is a second fallacious assumption.

What is really at work is the competition among politicians and political parties to invent new needs and problems and to offer the remedies—at the taxpayer's expense. Inevitably more civil servants are needed for these programs. Parkinson's Law—"work expands so as to fill the time available for its completion"—has made sure that those already on staff are busy.

Certainly Canada has gained, through the necessary action of governments, many social improvements in the last generation or so. Health insurance, unemployment insurance, family allowances, universal education and pensions systems all have been valuable tools in the creation of a more just society.

But it doesn't follow that the evolution of the welfare state can or should go on indefinitely. We already have warning signs that costs—social as well as financial—are in danger of outrunning benefits. Health costs are rising at a rate which if unchecked threatens to bankrupt the provincial treasury. Unemployment insurance and the welfare payments system are having at least a marginal effect on the vital work ethic.

Moreover social security programs require many thousands of workers to administer—workers who are thus not available for the production of the real wealth on which the whole structure of the welfare state depends.

We have clearly reached the stage where, first of all, proposals for new or expanded government programs must be given the most critical examination in the light of real need, and second, ways must be found to do what is really necessary without an automatic expansion of government bureaucracy.

This is not a matter of imposing an arbitrary freeze on the size of the civil service. It is a matter of seeking greater efficiency in operations, of discontinuing services that are no longer valuable and of shaking loose the habitual assumption of all bureaucracies that what is now in place must remain forever and anything new added on to it.

Carried to its logical conclusion Carson's view of inevitable bureaucratic expansion means that eventually we'd all be working for the government.

A World Beyond Their Ken

RUSSELL BAKER

BALTIMORE—An eerie week. Daytimes I'd go to Washington, sit on the marble and listen to people with federal-prose faces talk cosmic. A few billion dollars here, a billion there, war, peace, Kissinger, gross national product, double-digit inflation, presidential politics, future of America.

Nights I'd sit on the sidewalk in South Baltimore on another planet watching the cops circling in helicopters, hunting who knows what, listen to people with hard lives rage against welfare.

Daytimes, back in Washington, vital billion-dollar-thinkers worried about the state of the country over luncheon beef. Yes, there were bad omens. Too much cynicism about government in the country. Something had to be done, people had to have their faith in American institutions restored. Critical times for America, great decisions pending. People had to etcetera etcetera etcetera.

In South Baltimore at night, sitting on the sidewalk with a woman who runs a neighborhood political club, questions arise. Has she lost faith in American institutions? Her look is articulate. It says; "are you speaking English?" The cops swoop overhead in their helicopter. It has a spotlight. They do a lot of shooting in the neighborhood, she says. This sidewalk we're sitting on right here, they shot a guy here a few months ago, and it was the wrong guy, some harmless gawker, hurt bad, but they got the right guy anyhow. He never went to jail.

In Washington, everybody said things were really dull. They'd never seen such dullness. Newsweek had done a special story on the dullness. So had The New York Times. Absolutely right, too. Of course, there was Henry in the Middle East. Always good for a little theatre, Henry, but there was no getting around the underlying dullness. The country had to get to grips with the great issues.

In South Baltimore we ate spaghetti and sat on the sidewalk sweating into the dusk. Some black kids were riding their bikes the wrong way up a busy one-way street and the Orioles were losing a close one to Chicago on the radio in a room down the block. Fat women sat on stone steps airing themselves in bus exhaust fumes. Five black kids age 9, 10, 11, came down the block carrying sticks and turned the corner. "Looking for trouble," said a white woman, but they weren't. It was dull that night, really dull.

In the Washington daytime, vital men pondered oil. The greatest issue facing America that afternoon, future of the country at stake, great decisions to be made. Would Congress? Could the president? Absolutely vital. Yes, yes, the price of oil would rise again. No helping it, Americans had to snap to, bite bullet, tighten belt, wise up, quit wasting, act responsible. But how — how to raise the price? All at once, or little bit at a time? Absolutely vital. Vital men at grips with vital issue.

In South Baltimore at dusk: Are you people prepared to bite the bullet, tighten belt, wise up, quit wasting? Whir of police helicopter overhead, searching for criminals with spotlight. The widow being examined about willingness to do her duty refuses to face the issue on oil. She is angry about the landlord wanting to raise her house rent from $75 to $85. She is furious about welfare swindlers and food-stamp users.

What are they doing over there in Washington, anyhow? And the state legislators want another salary increase. They're all crooks.

What they're doing in Washington next day is arguing how many billions Israel is entitled to for signing peace papers for Henry, and whether the Egyptians will up their charge. Heavy foreign-policy stuff. War and peace in the balance. Building a new world order. Vital stuff, absolutely vital. Future of whole world. Fate of our grandchildren.

At dusk in South Baltimore, the street is full of kids, people sitting on sidewalk, fat women inhaling bus fumes on stone steps, motorcyclists, baseball-game listeners. Nobody here goes to the beach for the Labor Day weekend.

The woman in neighborhood politics has been in police court speaking well of a neighborhood woman who has been charged with arson. They're burning houses all over the neighborhood, she says. Everybody knows who's doing it and it's not the woman the cops hauled in, who happened to be drunk in the house when the firemen got there. The magistrate let her go after the neighborhood political woman made her promise the judge she'd go off the booze. The neighborhood political woman feels good about that. It's not as big as Henry wallpapering the Middle East with million-dollar bills, but it is still a considerable achievement of political action in a world whose existence is seldom dreamed of in absolutely vital Washington. Future of America and all that — that's the Washington game. South Baltimore's is the present. Tough buns, folks.

ITT Cuts Off Funds To Lisbon Branches

By MIGUEL ACOCA

MADRID (WP) — Charging loss of "effective management control," ITT has stopped the flow of operating funds to subsidiaries and affiliates in Portugal.

Affected are 7,000 workers, who months ago set up workers' committees to oversee the controversial multinational company's Portuguese enterprises, and their $100 million in assets.

International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. is extremely supsect in Portugal because of its role in the violent downfall of Chile's Marxist presidnet, Dr. Savador Allende, in the early 1970s.

ITT, which started operating in Portugal 43 years ago, manufacturers electronic components, electric motors and other equipment and has a majority interest in a large Lisbon hotel and a car rental agency.

Like most companies operating abroad, ITT depended on credit from local banks to finance its operations, but the nationalized Portuguese banks have refused to come to terms with ITT, spokesmen said.

Officials complained that one Portuguese plant, with sales of $3 million, now had an annual wage bill of $3.2 million.

Officials could not specify the amount paid to workers at the plant before the revolution.

ITT's letter to the government said that the company could not make any "more advances of funds" to "satisfy payments of salaries and other current operating expenses," and added that the decision was taken with "extreme sorrow and reluctance."

The company also complained it was "troubled" by the purge of key Portuguese employees by workers.

As in many other enterprises, Portuguese workers have ousted ITT supervisory personnel accused of being connected with the ousted rightist regime.

Meanwhile president Francisco da Costa Gomes summoned Portugals powerful revolutionary council for an emergency session today in the face of rebellious threats by the military's pro-communist faction.

Small bombs blew in a glass door at the ITT-owned Sheraton hotel and shattered windows at the Spanish embassy and the offices of Air Maroc airways adjacent to Iberian airlines.

A group calling itself "international group of revolutionary solidarity" claimed responsibility for the three blasts, saying in phone calls to news agencies the bombs were set off to protest against the death sentence for two Basque separatists in Spain.

No injuries were reported in the attacks.

Speed Mark Set

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah (Reuter) — An unofficial world land speed record was set here Tuesday —with the cab of a truck and trailer rig powered by a stock diesel engine. From a standing start, Iowa truckdrivers Harold Miller and Larry Lange pushed their nine-foot high, red, white and blue cab, named Liberty Bell, to 71.215 miles an hour at the one-mile mark. The previous world best of 61.30 miles an hour was set by Walter van Wortburg in Hockesheim, West Germany, in 1961.

Waldheim Gives Up on Cyprus

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI) — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim has abandoned his latest effort to settle the Cyprus crisis, citing a lack of "concrete proposals" from Greek and Turkish Cypriots.

But diplomatic sources said the issue may be brought before the United Nations for a full-scale debate when the General Assembly opens its regular annual session next week.

Greek Cypriot leader Glafkos Clerides and Turkish Cypriot chief Rauf Denktash blamed each other Wednesday as Waldheim announced an indefinite adjournment of the talks.

Clerides charged Denktash had come up with no new proposals and the Turkish leader said Clerides had refused to consider his idea

Diplomatic sources said the main problems were setting up a federated government on Cyprus, establishing Greek and Turkish sectors, returning refugees who fled their homes in the 1974 war and opening Nicosia airport.

Waldheim met separately with the two leaders early this week in advance of the formal fourth round of joint talks Wednesday.

But he adjourned the formal discussions after 2½ hours "in the absence of concrete proposals."

A brief communique said he would "remain in contact with the parties in regard to future action."

After the third round of negotiations in Vienna last month, Waldheim announced substantial progress and said he was hopeful for similar success at the fourth round.

Canada Bars Arab Woman Terrorist

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Canadian immigration department Wednesday has made clear that a Palestinian woman involved in two aircraft hijackings may not enter Canada — not even to promote a book.

An immigration department spokesman said the department is so determined about this it sent an alert to ports of entry to watch out for the woman — Leila Khaled — in case she tried to sneak into the country.

Khaled's autobiography has just been published here.

Khaled, a member of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, was invited to Canada by the firm New Canada Press, publishers of her book My People Must Live.

Caroline Perly, president of New Canada Press of Toronto which is publishing Khaled's autobiography, said she has sent a letter to the immigration authorities accusing them of "capitulating to U.S. imperialism and Zionism in the Middle East."

Khaled was captured in London after a shoot-out aboard an Israeli aircraft five years ago. She was freed in exchange for hostages held by other Palestinians.

Before that hijacking she joined others in hijacking a Trans World Airlines Boeing 747 that was eventually destroyed by fire.

Soviets Overtake U.S. in Oil Flow

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union became the world's leading oil-producer in 1974, surpassing the United States for the first time, the U.S. Bureau of Mines notes in a summary of petroleum trends.

The bureau said Soviet production of crude oil and field condensate, a related product, increased nine per cent to 3.4 billion barrels last year.

Meanwhile, U.S. production decreased five per cent to 3.2 billion barrels.

Petroleum demand was dampened by the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo and by steep increases in world oil prices.

Worldwide oil production in 1974 was nearly the same as in 1973 at 20.5 billion barrels, an increase of only 100 million barrels over the previous year.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), whose members include the Arab oil producing-countries which interrupted their deliveries to bring pressure on Israel, saw their annual production slip from 11.3 billion barrels in 1973 to 11.2 billion in 1974.

Europe and Japan, reacting to the embargo and higher prices, substantially reduced their oil imports in 1974.

Europe cut back oil imports by one million barrels a day to 13.7 million; Japan reduced imports by 116,000 barrels a day to 4.81 million barrels daily, and shrank its imports from the Middle East and Indonesia in favor of larger imports from China.

Despite its own embargo-sparked energy conservation, the U.S. saw its crude oil imports increase from 3,244,000 barrels a day in 1973 to 3,474,000 barrels daily in 1974.

Deodorized Drawers!

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In the beginning, there was the roll-on deodorant, then the spray-on. Now, chemist Tyrone Vigo is looking for a zip-up deodorant.

The research centre tries to find new uses for cotton and other domestic products, among its prized accomplishments is the now-popular permanent press process.

There's no problem finding chemicals that will kill stench-causing bacteria, although there are several other questions, Vigo said.

One is how long the deodorant drawers will keep their guard up.

Mushroom Warning

Don't be tempted by those white mushrooms which appeared around the University of Victoria campus after last month's wet weather, UVic biologist Dr. M. J. Ashwood-Smith has warned.

"Many lepiota naucina are having a field day on our campus and are springing up in joyful profusion," Ashwood-Smith says in a memo to all UVic departments.

This type of mushroom has caused several cases of poisoning in recent years, he says, so unless you're a mushroom expert don't go picking any to eat.

Crestwood

Crestwood Kitchens Ltd., which wholly owns Crestwood Distributors Ltd., Crestwood Kitchens Inc., and Fraser Whitewood Ltd., reports sharply reduced sales and net profit for the first six months of 1975 ended June 30.

Sales dipped 33.8 per cent to $2,307,193 compared with $3,485,332 in the corresponding period of 1974. Net earnings of $163,942 were down about 36 per cent from 1974's $258,438, and declined to 15.7 cents a share from 24.8 cents a share a year ago.

Directors said this directly reflected a downtrend in housing starts, and a strike that closed the plant for two months.

business

Daon

Daon Development Corp. of Vancouver reports earnings for the nine months ended July 31 were the highest for any nine-month period in the corporation's history.

John Poole, Daon president, said in his report to shareholders that revenue increased to $70.5 million from $49.9 million for the same nine-month period in 1974.

He said net income increased to $3.7 million or $2.47 a share from $2.5 million or $1.84 a share for the corresponding period last year.

Poole said Daon, operating mainly in Vancouver, Edmonton and Calgary, "is seriously considering the development of new rental apartments in Calgary and Vancouver."

Daon is involved in real estate.

Cassiar

Cassiar Asbestos Corp. Ltd. reports net earnings of $4.44 million or 80.8 cents a share for the six months ended June 30, compared with earnings of $221,371 or four cents a share for the same period last year.

Peter Steen, company president, said the increased earnings were due to price increases and greater efficiency of operations.

The company's mine at Clinton Creek, near Clinton, recorded a profit of $2.41 million during the first six months this year, compared with a restated loss of $421,312 last year. The mine is scheduled to close down in 1978.

Rivtow

Net earnings of Rivtow Straits Ltd. and subsidiary companies declined to 27 cents a share in the first six months of 1975 from 40 cents a share in the first six months of 1974, the semi-annual report says.

Sales revenue increased to $23.8 million, but costs and expenses were up to $23.2 million from $15.8 million.

Net income for the six months ended June 30, 1975, was $654,000 compared with $796,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Since the beginning of the year working capital has increased by $194,000, and now totals $2,184,000.

In his report to shareholders, C. S. Cosulich, president, said that the profit could have been substantially higher if the logging, lumber, pulp and mining industries had not been in such a severe state of recession.

The performance during the last half of 1975 will be significantly affected by the duration of the strikes in the industries served, he added.

Gulf Oil

Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. said it has acquired an interest in 14 million acres along the Labrador shelf, increasing the company's total interest off the east coast of Labrador to 42 million acres.

Gulf has acquired a 10-percent interest in 13 million acres held by BP Canada Ltd., Columbia Gas Development of Canada Ltd. and Standard Oil Company of British Columbia Ltd.; and a minor interest in one million acres held by Trans-Prairie Pipelines Ltd.

As a result of this acquisition, Gulf is participating in the Indian Harbor well currently being drilled by the operator, BP, some 480 miles north of St. John's, Nfld., and 72 miles southeast of the Gudrid natural gas discovery well drilled by Eastcan Exploration Ltd. last year.

Gulf already held interests in 28 million acres off the Labrador coast before its latest acquisition.

Plastic Destroys Itself

LONDON (UPI) — A British company Wednesday announced the first commercial use of plastics which are easily destroyed by bacteria.

"It could end pollution by plastics," said Prof. G. J. L. Griffin of Bunel University.

Griffin devised a technique of adding simple starch to plastic in the manufacturing process. The resut, he said, is dramatic.

When the starch-containing plastic is buried, for instance, bacteria penetrate the thin plastic layer and liquify the starch, and eventually the plastic is converted to water, carbondioxide and ordinary soil.

Cobroll Ltd., a British paper firm which sponsored Griffin's research, has built a plant to manufacture supermarket carrier bags from biodegradable plastic.

After the Police Leave, What Then for Boston?

Times News Services

BOSTON — Boston has bought an uneasy peace after three days of massive busing for school desegregation, but some residents are anxious about what will happen when the vast police presence in the streets is reduced.

"They've got the lid on now but what's going to happen when the lid comes off?" said Ellen Jackson, director of the Institute on Schools and Education at Freedom House in Roxbury, which is overseeing desegregation for the black community.

Others, including Mayor Kevin White, are concerned that business may accelerate white flight from the public schools, and still others are worried about lost education time for thousands of boycotting students.

Attendance figures continued to climb Wednesday — 68 per cent showed up for classes — and there were no incidents of violence in the schools. But at least 25,000 students are still out of school and many vow they will be out for a year.

One city official said more non-whites were attending school than whites.

The arrest total through the first three days of the desegregation plan was 103, including 74 pro-busing demonstrators arrested the first day.

The attendance breakdown through Wednesday showed 64 per cent of all the white students enrolled were in school, 69.7 per cent of the other minorities, 74 per cent of the blacks, and Original projections had indicated the system would be only 48 per cent non-white if all students attended classes.

"The figures speak for themselves," said Peter Meade, an aide to Mayor White. "Today we do in fact have a majority non-white school system."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 25-year-old woman who used credit cards from a stolen wallet will attend the Community Diversion Centre and a Life Skills program as part of her suspended sentence and probation.

Sandra Lorene Callioux, 1291 Denman, appeared in provincial court Wednesday with a pre-sentence report showing she has served jail terms.

"The program offered by the probation officer seems to be the only alternative to increasingly long periods of incarceration," said Judge Fred Green.

She was arrested Aug. 22 and charged with fraud, attempted fraud and possession of stolen property.

Robert Daniel Adams, 32, of 989 Balmoral, was fined $250 when he changed his plea to guilty on two counts of marijuana possession and two of causing a disturbance.

The drug incidents occurred in the city jail July 30 and 31. Location of both disturbances July 23 and 30 was McDonald's Hamburgers, 980 Pandora, where he sat shouting and swearing until staff members called the police.

Defence lawyer William McElmoyle told judge Green the accused could not get a job in his trade until he got the artifical leg already made for him at the G. F. Strong Rehabilitation Centre in Vancouver.

Adams hasn't had a leg for 10 months, he said, and human resources workers "can't put their finger on the file."

* * *

Craig Sillars, 20, of no fixed address, will serve eight months in jail for stealing $220 from a Victoria area home where he was a guest.

Prosecutor Nick Lang said his pre-sentence report showed a record including narcotics convictions, and an attitude rejecting guidance and counselling.

* * *

Ronald John King, 18, of 515 Prince Rupert, pleaded guilty to trying to steal a car transmission in Saanich in August and was fined $500.

His pre-sentence report said the incident was out of character for him.

* * *

"You haven't learned to deal with money. Start building your life. You're almost out of time," Judge Green told Russel Irving Bannister, 26, of 3929 Glanford, giving him three months in prison concurrent to a two-month sentence he got Monday.

The new sentence is for theft of $54.50 from Carey Home Service Aug. 17 and false pretences for cashing a worthless $150 cheque there Aug. 15.

* * *

Howard Clement Baker, 17, of 1224 Caledonia, was fined $100 and given 15 months' probation during which he must attend a Cowichan Bay forestry training program.

He was found guilty July 25 of possession of a stolen car.

* * *

In traffic court, Lawrence Jerald Kwasnycia, 18, of 6695 Lincroft, Sooke, received 21 days in jail after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

Receiving $450 fines for the same offence were Dennis James Boylan, 22, of 2560 Penrhyn; Mark Alfred Johnson, 25, of 240 Simcoe, and Angus Conchie, 54, of Campbell River.

Judge D. R. Campbell gave $350 fines to Paul Douglas Cumberbirch, 23, of 6294 Robin Way, and Clifford Ray O'Connor, 51, of 515 Apollo Way, both for impaired driving.

Slain Robber 'Used Police To Commit Suicide'

EDMONTON (CP) — A man shot and killed by police investigating a liquor store robbery in June wanted "to commit suicide and used the police department to do it," an Edmonton Police staff sergeant said Wednesday at the inquest into the man's death.

S. Sgt. John Fitzpatrick said that from the information police had, they believed Donald Rose to be a dangerous man.

Rose, 29, was shot and killed during a confrontation with police outside his south side home July 27 after robbing a nearby liquor store of about $900.

The inquest was told that during the robbery and as police closed in around his home, Rose brandished a sten gun as if it were loaded and replied "no way" to police demands that he surrender the gun. The weapon was later found to be empty.

Constable Gary Tkachuk told the inquest he feared for his life as he fired two shots outside the Rose residence to allow himself to safely leave his car. His partner then fired a third shot. Two more shots were fired later.

Two of the shots struck Rose's car. Dr. R. J. Swallow of Edmonton testified the bullet that struck Rose in the head had ricocheted because it was flattened. Rose died early the following morning at University Hospital. The inquest continues.

VIGILANTES VETOED

REGINA (CP) — A proposal to set up a native street patrol to curb bar-room and street violence in downtown Regina appeared to have met failure Wednesday as both hotelmen and police expressed disagreement with the plan.

Police chief Al Huget said he disagrees with the basic idea.

"Why a native patrol? Why not a white patrol or a Ukrainian patrol?"

The patrol would be unnecessary, he added.

Ottawa Aid For Five Ethiopians

EDMONTON (CP) — Ottawa has granted emergency work permits to five Ethiopian students who found their funds cut short when a military regime took power in their country.

When they arrived here, the students were counting on money being sent from home to finance their education at the University of Alberta.

But the political overthrow in Ethiopia that deposed emperor Haile Selassie stopped the flow of money out of the troubled North African nation.

The financial burden has been eased somewhat with the university granting the students a remission of fees for the current academic school year.

Veteran Retires

PORT HURON, Mich. (AP) — Veteran centre Ray Germain of Port Huron Flags of the International Hockey League has retired. The 31-year-old Germain will become manager of a sporting goods store in Sarnia, Ont.

BankAmerica Branch Opens

SAN FRANCISCO (CP) — BankAmerican Corp. will open a Canadian subsidiary to supplement the Bank of America's Canadian office, established last year in Toronto. D. A. McWilliams, Canadian representative of Bank of America in New York, will become president of the subsidiary.

Baker Fined Over Taxes

CALGARY (CP) — A former Calgary bakery owner who evaded paying taxes on more than $80,000 of income was fined $2,000 in provincial court Wednesday.

Sam Yurkiw, now a baker in Yellowknife, N.W.T., was found guilty of evading taxes on $24,964 personal income and $57,542 company income between 1968 and 1972. The taxes payable were $20,519.

Yurkiw moved to Yellowknife to start a new life after his Calgary business went bankrupt.

KRAELING'S HITS HELP INGRAHAM WIN PLAYOFFS

Paul Kraeling made every turn at bat count Wednesday and helped Ingraham Hotel to a sweep of both league and playoff titles in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

Ingraham bounced Seaboard Construction 5-2 in the rain-delayed deciding game of the best-of-three playoff final at Royal Athletic Park.

Kraeling, the Ingraham catcher, bashed out a two-run homer in the bottom of the fourth inning to tie the score at 2-2 and then helped produce a three-run surge in the fifth inning. He had two hits on two trips while scoring twice and driving in two runs.

In the fifth inning, Mike Cox hit a one-out double, went to third on a single by Kraeling and later scored on an error. Kraeling came home on a single by Dave Kroschinsky, who eventually scored on the only other error committed by Seaboard.

Nelson struck out two batters, allowed no bases on balls and scattered two hits. Phil Berry, who came in to replace starter Barry Wilkin in the fifth, absorbed the loss.

Football: In Liske, Lions Strike Bargain

When the B.C. Lions got quarterback Peter Liske from Calgary Stampeders they also got one of the most respected contracts in the Canadian Football League. Now it looks as if it may be cheap at any price. There is no doubt in this observer's mind that if the Lions are to make it back into respectability this season, after all that has gone before, Liske is the man to fashion the winning pattern.

The reasoning should be patently obvious. Liske, when physically fit, is as good a quarterback as there is in the CFL. He was when he was with the Stamps before he went to the National Football League and although the passing years may have dulled some of the reflexes he still ranks as a master passer and certainly not lacking in experience.

When he came to the Lions last season, he knew he was to be No. 2 because Don Moorhead, whom previous coach Eagle Keys thought so highly of, was No. 1. This was fine because Moorhead was young, showed promise and would be the club's quarterback of the future while Liske, if he wasn't exactly aged at 34, would be an excellent stand-by who could play some.

An over-simplification of the Lions' quarter-backing situation perhaps, because actually Moorhead never has measured up to the glory predicted for him by Keys. Not only has he been injury prone much of his CFL career, but he also had that unhappy faculty of throwing interceptions at the most critical points in crucial games. Now he is out again, for the season, and Liske is heir apparent.

It may be co-incidental, but since the departure of coach Keys and GM Jackie Parker, plus the loss of Moorhead and the subsequent installation of Liske as quarterback, the Lions have won two in a row and, incredibly enough, they now can be considered a threat to make the playoffs. If nobody is about to do hand-stands over the revival, the Lions needing all the help they can get, at least it much figure that Liske has played a big part in that drive.

Dull as that game against Winnipeg was on Tuesday it was evident that the Lions were the superior club, especially on defence, which hasn't been one of their problem areas; and on offence, even if the offence didn't produce a TD. That will come. Liske directed a sound game, mixed his plays well and, if B.C. had a field-goal kicker, particularly in the first half, the final margin might have been greater. Keys, it is known, has a complicated offence, and maybe the Lions still use it. Still, it doesn't take away from that old adage, it's not how many plays you call, it's how you execute them that counts.

This is where Liske can shine, given the necessary protection, of course, and this could be the Lions' pressure point. Otherwise, Liske has all the credentials. He was the most valuable player in the CFL in 1967 and naturally jumped at the chance when the NFL beckoned in '69.

But when he joined Denver, it wasn't an instant success story. He only played about half the schedule the first season and earned few credits the following season.

Meanwhile, his coach at Calgary, Jerry Williams, had ended up at Philadelphia and that's where they were reunited in '71. Things were going along nicely with the Eagles until Liske met Jethro Pugh of Dallas in the second season and hurt his shoulder. After missing two games he returned to win three of four. By then the Eagles were out of contention, so they elected to take a look at rookie John Reaves, who started and lost the last four games. Next year came the wholesale changes coaches, captains, veterans were gone. So was Liske.

He had a chance then to go to two other NFL clubs but elected to return to Calgary. On his return, however, he was back to what he had left at Philly, a rebuilding program, new coaches, the whole bit. So he asked the stamps to trade him, or he would retire, and that's how he became a Lion. That was late last year and again he was no instant hero as the Lions were in their death-throes and after such a fine beginning, too.

This year when he arrived, he said, "I've never been in better physical or mental shape." Then he got hurt, and so did Moorhead. In all fairness, there's no doubt that this had a great bearing on the team's lacklustre start.

Now he is healthy again and it may be significant that the Lions have won two in a row. Is there a better reason?

Cougar Hopefuls Facing More Cuts

Pat Ginnell, manager-coach of the Western Canada Hockey League's Victoria Cougars, will have many important decisions to make over the next few days.

Ginnell cut 10 players from the training camp roster at Juan de Fuca Arena on Wednesday and added 19-year-old goalie Mark Romankiw from Anchorage, Alaska.

This brings the total number of players in camp to 61 and Ginnell wants to pare the figure to about 50 before moving into Memorial Arena on Monday to continue workouts.

So he'll be keeping careful watch at the first of two intra-squad games at 8 tonight in Juan de Fuca Arena as well as during two exhibition games against the Chiefs in Kamloops this weekend.

Goalkeeper Guy Comeau, a rookie from Calgary, and defencemen Murray Slezak of Victoria and Pat Mallough of Saskatoon were among the Wednesday cuts.

Reed Ignores Pains To Batter Stamps

REGINA (CP) — An ailing George Reed gave Saskatchewan Roughriders all the scoring they needed Wednesday as the Roughriders scored a 31-17 Western Football Conference victory over Calgary Stampeders.

Reed, the perennial conference rushing star, shrugged off a painful arm and shoulder injury, to score three touchdowns. His majors, on runs of two, three and six yards, moved the veteran fullback into fourth place in the Western Conference scoring race with 42 points on seven touchdowns.

The victory, Saskatchewan's second over Calgary this season, left the Roughriders in a first-place tie with Edmonton Eskimos who were idle Wednesday. Calgary, now with five losses in eight games, shares the conference cellar with British Columbia Lions.

"The name of the game is execution, and we didn't execute on offence," said Calgary coach Jim Woods whose team jumped off to a 7-0 lead in the first quarter but began to falter in the second.

Calgary took a 14-10 lead into the second half, but from there it was all downhill as Saskatchewan scored 21 points, 14 of them in the final quarter.

There were three interceptions, two of them off Calgary quarterback Joe Pisarcik. Saskatchewan's Ron Lancaster had one picked off.

Jim Marshall ran back one Pisarcik interception back 57-yards for a touchdown. Other Roughrider scoring was supplied by Jack Abendschan who booted four converts and a 17-yard field goal.

Tom Forzani opened scoring for Calgary on a 25-yard pass from Piscarcik. Larry Cates scored on a 37-yard interception runback and Cyril McFall rounded out Stampeders' scoring with two converts and a 14-yard field goal.

Part of Calgary's trouble in the second half was due to an injury to halfback Willie Burden who suffered a leg cramp late in the third quarter that put him out of the game. He was Calgary's leading rusher with 70 yards on 14 carries.

Saskatchewan piled up 395 yard with Lancaster gaining 259 through the air. He was good on 20 of 33 passes. Calgary gained 267 yards, with 181 through the air. Pisarcik completed 17 of 28 tosses while Karl Douglas failed on the four attempts he made in relief.

On Saturday, Toronto Argonauts move to Vancouver to meet the Lions in a Canadian Football League interlocking contest.

Players Reject Pact, Stage Set for Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — With an overwhelming vote, the rank and file of the National Football League Players' Association has rejected a management offer for a new contract and set the stage for a strike with the opening of the season only two weeks away.

Ed Garvey, association executive director, said Wednesday the voting members of the association rejected the collective bargaining agreement proposal by 74 to 36, with five teams still to be counted.

Garvey declined to speculate on the possibility of a strike by the union but said the membership would be asked to vote on the issue within a week.

"We will have to see what the players say about it," he said. "The comments in so far as a strike is concerned have varied team from team. Some are militant while others are conservative.

"We hope that this vote will convince all 26 owners to get involved in the bargaining process . . . and give us an offer we can't refuse."

The contract vote was taken during the last weekend in an effort to break the deadlock between the union and management in negotiations that have dragged on for 1½ years and led to a 42-day strike during last year's exhibition season.

The players returned to camp and played the 1974 season without a collective bargaining agreement.

At a news conference Aug. 28, the association urged management to submit an offer by Labor Day for the players to vote on but the owners refused, saying the union leadership had placed a "serous new roadblock" in the way of a collective bargaining agreement by its position that any restraint on player movement is illegal.

In New York, Sargent Karch, executive director of the owners' management council, said a resumption of bargaining this week was unlikely.

"It's already Wednesday afternoon and we've had no contact from Garvey or the federal mediator regarding the resumption of negotiations, so I wouldn't expect them," he said.

NFL Veterans Feel Pinch As Club Rosters Trimmed

By THE ASSOCIATED

Dan Conners, Oakland's long-time middle linebacker, and a host of other name players joined the unemployment rolls Wednesday as a result of the National Football League roster trimmings.

Connors was a 12-year star for the Raiders, who also cut defensive back Jimmy Warren, an 11-year NFL veteran, and wide receiver Frank Pitt, a 10-year vet. The Raiders also traded seventh-year running back Charlie Smith to Philadelphia Eagles for a future draft choice.

Also waived Wednesday were Houston running back Vic Washington, a former Canadian Football League player, and wide receiver Jerry LeVias, New York Giants cornerback Pete Athas, and St. Louis Cardinals centre Cal Withrow.

Veteran San Francisco '49er tackle Len Rohde retired and veteran cornerback Charlie Stukes was placed on the injured reserved list by Los Angeles Rams.

The '49ers also waived linebacker Tom Hull, tight end Al Chandler and defensive tackle Bill Belk along with rookie offensive tackle Caesar Douglas of Illinois Wesleyan.

The Giants, who obtained defensive lineman David Boone and quarterback Mike Wells on waivers from Minnesota, also announced the retirement of quarterback Scott Hunter, who formerly played with Green Bay Packers and Buffalo Bills.

Washington is a five-year NFL veteran who formerly played for Ottawa Rough Riders and British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League.

Cut by Baltimore Colts were running back Herb Mul-Key, quarterback Steve Joachim, defensive ends Denni Wirgowski and Mike Siefert, defensive backs Royce McKinney and Floyd Hogan, offensive lineman Merle Wang and placekicker Chris Gartner. The Colts also asked waivers on offensive tackle Dave Simonson and wide receivers Ollie Smith and Don Westbrook and placed rookie running back Kim Jones on the injured reserve list.

Chile Will Play

SANTIAGO, Chile (Reuter) — Chile will go ahead with its Davis Cup tennis semi-final match in Sweden later this month although its star player, Jaime Fillol, has refused to play because of threats against his life.

The president of the Chilean Tennis Federation, Heran Basagoitia, said Wednesday night the full Chilean team will be chosen today for the match against Sweden in Baastad Sept. 19-21.

Fillol's parents had also received an anonymous letter from Sweden saying, "any tennis player from the fascist Chilean state will be assassinated. We are waiting for them."

Although the threat seemed to be aimed at the entire Chilean team, Fillol apparently felt most threatened because the letter was sent to his parents.

Wall, Stoke Collapse

LONDON (Reuter) — Stoke City lost 2-1 to fourth-division Lincoln City in the second round of the English League Cup soccer tournament Wednesday in a match packed with drama.

When Dennis Booth headed what proved the winning goal 22 minutes before the end a wall collapsed, throwing some of the 13,472 spectators onto the pitch. Several were carried away on stretchers and it was five minutes before the match could be resumed.

Fine goaltending by England's Peter Shilton enabled Stoke to hold its hosts to a 1-1 tie before Booth scored.

Stoke, which also has Scottish, Welsh and Irish internationals on its squad, finished fifth in the first division last season, only four points behind Derby County, the champions.

CHRIS BOOSTS MONEY RECORD

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert has won more money this year than any woman in sports history.

The United States Tennis Association announced Wednesday that Chris's $25,000 first prize in the U.S. Open pushed her official earnings in the U.S. to $261,350.

Counting overseas play, Miss Evert's over-all winnings amount to $280,927, nearly $20,000 above the record she set last year. Her 1974 total was $261,460.

Martina Navratilova, the 18-yar-old Czech girl who defected to the U.S. last weekend, is second in the women's money list with $126,263, followed by Virginia Wade of Britain with $110,063.

Evonne Goolagong of Australia has won $86,485. Then follow: Margaret Court, $83,538; Billie Jean King, $77,640; Olga Morozova, $49,188; Betty Stove, $46,075; Francoise Durr, $43,200; and Julie Heldman, $38,150.

On the U.S. Ladies' Professional Golf Association tour, Sandra Palmer continues to lead the money-winning list with earnings of $72,121.

She is followed by JoAnne Carner with $61,965 and Carol Mann, who collected $6,200 for a victory at Dallas last weekend to raise her total for 1975 to $60,202.

Next in line are Judy Rankin, $48,674; Sandra Haynie, $44,744; Jane Blalock, $37,980 and Kathy McMullen, $35,572.

Petes Pound Cables Again

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — Another strong second period helped Peterborough Gray-Munros drop Burnaby Cablevision 13-7 Wednesday and take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven Minto Cup series for the Canadian junior lacrosse championship.

Peterborough, who tied the series up Tuesday with a powerful second-period performance, outgunned the West Coast club 5-1 in the middle frame.

Paul Evans led Peterborough with four goals and a former player with Victoria McDonalds, Dan Green, had two goals and three assists.

The two Victoria McDonalds playing for Burnaby once again stood out with Bob Cool connecting for a goal and three assists while Kevin Alexander also had three assists.

Both teams now have a two-day rest before the series resumes Friday night. A fifth game is scheduled for Sunday.

STAPLETON TO RACERS

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Veteran Pat Stapleton was signed today by Indianapolis Racers, the World Hockey Association team announced. Details of his contract were not disclosed.

The Racers assumed the allstar defenceman's contract earlier this year when the WHA's Chicago Cougars folded. Stapleton was player-coach of the Cougars last year.

Stapleton, along with team-mates Dave Dryden and Ralph Backstrom and a lawyer associate, bought the Chicago franchise last year but were unable to make it a paying proposition. Stapleton was an all-star defenceman during his eight years with Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

Dey Questions Hall Selection

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Joe Dey, for 40 years one of the leading administrators in U.S. golf, questioned the propriety of his selection to the World Golf Hall of Fame at induction ceremonies Wednesday.

"I always have felt that halls of fame should be for the competitors," said Dey.

Dey, a former executive director of the U.S. Golf Association and the first commissioner of the pro tour, and Fred Corcoran, a former pro tour director and founder of the women's pro tour, were inducted along with six pioneer players.

John H. Taylor, five-time winner of the British Open between 1898 and 1913 and a founder of the British PGA;

Joyce Wethered, many-time British Women's champion;

Chick Evans, winner of the 1916 U.S. Open and Amateur, the 1920 Amateur, eight-time winner of the Western Amateur and for 50 years a competitor in the U.S. Amateur.

Morris, Taylor and Anderson are deceased.

Their induction into the $2.5 million Hall of Fame, which opened a year ago, brought the number of members to 21.

THE TENNIS SCENE

By Max Low

Open tournament tennis on Vancouver Island ends this weekend with the Last Chance Event, which gets under way tonight and wraps up Sunday at the Island Indoor Tennis centre.

But whatever the outcome of this tourney, it won't affect the Vancouver Island Lawn Tennis Assocation rankings much, because both Marty Taylor and Brenda Cameron have left little doubt—they're the best players this side of VILTA tournaments — the the water.

Marty has won three of five VILTA tournaments — hte Island Indoor Classic, the Capital City Championship and the Victoria Closed — and leads the rankings with 195 points.

Tied for second place with 11 points are hard-hitting Neil Coutts and veteran Tony Simnett. And they can't catch Marty because either can only pick up a maximum of 50 points for taking the Last Chance.

Roger Skillings, a stylish former Canadian junior campion who isn't playing in this tourney, is fourth with 65 points; Ted Davies is fifth with 45; John Nichol has 35; Greg Miller and Tim Cummings are tied for seventh place with 25 points each.

First four seeds in the men's singles this weekend are Taylor, Coutts, Simnett and Davies.

Island Indoor Tennis pro Barb Johnston surprised Miss Cameron in the final of the first tournament of the year, but Brenda bounced back and won the next four in a row to pile up a whopping 230 points.

Miss Johnson is second with 110 points. Sally Hemeon has 60, Kathy Metcalfe 50 and Sandra Moss and Shirley Knight of Courtenay are tied for fifth spot with 30 each.

Entires are good for the Last Chance tourney, although the women's numbers are still down, and the new "B" event singles, introduced this year, is more popular than the "A" event for both men and women.

A total of 46 players have entered the men's "B" event while there are only 28 in the men's "A" singles. There are 28 pairs in the men's doubles.

In the women's events, there are 16 in the "B" singles and 14 in the "A" and 11 pairs in the doubles.

Last weekend's grand finals day of the Second Annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis Tournament was a real success — bigger in fact than the first annual windup a year ago. Apart from the sunshine, several factors contributed greatly to that success. They included:

—The appearance and fine performances given by British pros Mark Cox and Richard Lewis in their exhibitions:

—The considerable talent and sportsmanship displayed by all eight finalists in the public parks events;

—The special assistance given to Times and VILTA organizers by Oak Bay municipal authorities, particularly David Rostrup. He has put a lot into it both years.

Thanks Dave.

Zisk Best Teacher As Tom Gets Lesson

By The Associated Press

You can fool some of the Pittsburgh Pirates some of the time — but you can't fool them all of the time.

Tom Seaver learned this lesson Wednesday night.

The New York Met star pitched a brilliant four-hitter the last time they met on Sept. 1 in New York. But in their most recent meeting in Pittsburgh, Seaver was treated with little respect, getting beaten 8-4.

"We have the capability to light anybody up," said Pittsburgh manager Danny Murtaugh after the victory kept the Pirates' lead at six games in the National League East.

Richie Zisk, who watched from the sidelines last week while Seaver overpowered the Pirates 3-0 with a 10-strikeout performance, knocked in four runs Wednesday night with a homer and single.

"In New York, he was overpowering," said Zisk. "Tonight he had good velocity but he wasn't getting his breaking ball over as much as you'd like to."

The runnerup Philadelphia Phillies kept pace with the Pirates by beating Montreal Expos 5-1. St. Louis Cardinals, meanwhile, dropped further out of the pennant chase by losing a 7-5 decision to Chicago Cubs.

Elsewhere in the National League, San Diego Padres whipped Atlanta Braves 2-1, Los Angeles Dodgers ripped Cincinnati Reds 3-2 and Houston Astros defeated San Francisco Giants 6-3.

Dave Kingman's second-inning homer gave New York a 1-0 lead. Pittsburgh tagged Seaver for the tying run in their half of the second and took the lead to stay when Zisk singled home a run in the fourth.

Oakalla Worried by Trio

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The British Columbia Corrections branch has sent a letter to Provincial Court Judge Philip Govan expressing concern over keeping three B.C. Penitentiary prisoners in the medium-security Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla).

Judge Govan disclosed the letter Wednesday when Andrew Graydon Bruce, 26, Claire Daniel Wilson, 26, and Dwight Lucas, 20, appeared for a remand on charges of being involved in a 41-hour hostage incident which began June 9 at the penitentiary. They also are charged with murder in the shooting of prison classification officer Mary Steinhauser, 32, fatally shot by a prison tactical squad which rushed the area where 15 hostages were being held.

The judge said he hadn't read the letter in detail, but added that if the attorney-general wishes to make representations over security they should be made in court.

Judge Govan ordered the three accused transferred to Oakalla from the penitentiary three weeks ago when they complained they had been subject to gas attacks and beatings in the penitentiary.

Bill Jack, assistant executive director of institutional services, said Wednesday he wrote the letter, but declined to divulge its contents.

"I don't want to get involved in a controversy with the judge," he said.

Henry Bjarnason, Oakalla director, said that Oakalla is no place for Bruce, Wilson and Lucas pending trial.

"They are dangerous people," he said. "Oakalla was never intended to hold people for long periods awaiting their court trials. This is a medium security prison. While they are here we are continually concerned over the safety of our staff, other inmates and the public."

The three men are accused of holding 15 prison personnel hostage for 41 hours while demanding air transportation out of the country.

The incident ended when prison guards stormed the hostage area, and during the action, Bruce was wounded and Miss Steinhauser killed.

Spectators were searched when Bruce, Wilson and Lucas appeared Wednesday in stocking feet, leg chains and arm restraints. At the time of the incident, each was serving life imprisonment for violent crimes.

The trio was remanded for a week.

RABID BAT HUNT IN CHILLIWACK

CHILLIWACK (CP) — The health unit in this Fraser Valley community is calling for help in locating bats suspected of having rabies. This follows receipt of a report that of five bats tested, two were found to be rabid.

The bats were found in the Upper Fraser Valley.

Health inspector Wayne Thompson said there's no need for alarm at this point. "We are not really that concerned at this point."

Six other bats now are being tested. Thompson said if more rabid bats do turn up, massive extermination will have to start. He said the public would be called on to locate major nesting areas and the bats would have to be destroyed.

Enrolment Rises

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Enrolment at the College of New Caledonia is up 21.2 per cent to 400 full-time academic students from 333 by this time last year, college officials said Wednesday. Full-time technical students have increased to 179 from 134 in 1974.

Escapees Hunted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police hunted Wednesday for Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre escapers Julie Hanson, 30, and Margaret McCallum, 33, who were serving sentences for offences ranging from soliciting and robbery to heroin possession. They escaped by sawing a bar on an upper floor window and lowering themselves 15 feet on an extension cord.

GORGE CANOE RACES SET FOR WEEKEND

The annual Gorge canoe races will be held this weekend, beginning at Craigflower Park at 1 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Open to the public, the races are sponsored by the Victoria Canoe Club.

There will be a variety of events which competitors can enter for a $2 fee which includes a barbecue on the Saturday following completion of that day's racing.

Interim Cheques For B.C. Medics

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia doctors expect cheques this month from the Medical Services Commission to tide them over delays in processing medical care claims.

The government has also hired a private firm to process 880,000 outstanding claims, says the B.C. Medical Association president-elect, William Jory.

An article by Dr. Jory in the BCMA newsletter says a special BCMA commitee learned of the moves in a meeting last month with Provincial Health Minister Dennis Cocke.

He says the meeting was sought because late payment of medicare claims has increased drastically over the last two months.

"Many physicians were being placed in the difficult position of borrowing money to maintain overhead and tax payments," the article says.

Cocke is on vacation, and the deputy health minister, Bill Lyle, could not be reached for comment.

In an interview Wednesday, Dr. Jory said the late payments problem has been attributed to amalgamation of three medical insurance carriers into the Medical Services Plan, and to a shortage of staff during summer months.

He said he expects interim payments to doctors will bring their payments up to the level they might normally expect based on previous experience.

THE WORKS of local sculptor and painter Rick Thomas will be exhibited at the Open Space gallery, 506 Fort Street, next week from Monday through Saturday.

Thomas is perhaps best known for his craftsmanship in duplicating Victorian buildings in miniature, his drawings of local architecture and illustrations for various publications.

The show will open at 8 p.m. Monday, Sept. 15, and will be on view daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Booth Students' Art on Show

A drawing and painting art exhibit will open Sunday at the Emily Carr home, 207 Government, and continue until Sept. 27.

On display will be art by past and current students of Tine Anriessen Booth.

Sunday's opening is from 2 to 4 p.m., and regular viewing hours afterwards will be daily from 10 to 4 p.m.

Canada Rejects Beef Trade Deal

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada has rejected as too limited a United States proposal to begin reopening the border immediately to trade in beef and veal products, U.S. officials say.

A Canadian embassy official here confirmed Wednesday that an offer had been made to Ottawa and that it had been turned down.

The U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said there have been no subsequent moves by the Canadians to make a counter-proposal or to hold additional negotiations on the touchy subject. But embassy spokesmen stressed that Canada remains open to any new suggestions on what they described as a more balanced deal than the one just refused.

The situation currently is that both the U.S. and Canada have stringent limits, imposed more than a year ago, on the import of beef and veal from each other. These are generally expected to be removed at the start of 1976 but the trade loss in the meantime is substantial.

The controls, or quotas, were first put into effect by Canada on the import of slaughter cattle, beef and veal on Aug. 12, 1974. The U.S. responded by slapping barriers on the import of Canadian cattle, beef, hogs, pork and veal. Last month Canada told the U.S. it would not renew the cattle quotas beyond their one-year expiry date and the U.S. responded by lifting controls on Canadian cattle, hogs and pork.

Details of the latest U.S. offer have not been fully disclosed but the main outlines have emerged from discussions with various sources.

Basically, the United States proposed that both countries scrap remaining controls immediately, giving U.S. meat exporters full access to the Canadian market, but with Canada limiting its over-all sales in the American market to about 22 million pounds this year, rather than the 17 million permitted underthe quotas.

Ordinarily Canada might be expected to sell up to 80 million pounds of beef and veal in the U.S. yearly. Full access would again have been granted to the Canadians next year under the proposal.

U.S. negotiators acknowledge that such an agreement would have been somewhat one-sided but they say their room for compromise is severely limited by the meat import law. Under this legislation major foreign suppliers each year set volunary limits on their U.S. sales to keep total meat imports to the United States below a ceiling seet by the governemnt.

U.S. officials say they are concerned that unless there is some assurance of restraint from the Canadians, imports from Canada might shove the total through the ceiling, bringing automatic formal controls into effect.

But the Canadians have never been subject to the meat law before and they seem reluctant, U.S. officials said ,to set a precedent by accepting voluntary limits in this case.

ATLIN DIVIDED ON BOUNDARIES

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Two briefs presented Wednesday to the Provincial Electoral Boundary Commission hearings differed splitting the riding of Atlin in northwestern British Columbia.

Peter Curran, unsuccessful as a Social Credit candidate in 1969 and as an independent in 1972 in Atlin, favored division of the riding while Mayor Ian McLeod of Stewart opposed any boundary changes.

Curran said the Nass Valley region of the riding should be joined with the Skeena riding which, in turn, should besplit into Skeena North and Skeena South.

He said any member elected for Atlin as its boundaries now stand would be required to spend too much time in travel and wouldn't have much time for the electorate he served.

Mayor McLeod said most of the population in the riding lives in 17 communities and this makes it relatively easy to reach the electorate.

He also said taking the Nass region from the riding would discriminate against Indians who are 33 per cent of the vast riding's 2,800 voters. If the valley was joined to the Skeena riding which was 16,000 voters, the Indians' voice would be reduced.

Que. MLAs Divided On Language

MONTREAL (CP) — The ongoing dispute over Quebec's Official Language Act took on partisan overtones Wednesday as Parti Quebecois leaders critized the legislation and Premier Robert Bourassa defended it.

PQ president Rene Levesque and Jacques Morin, opposition leader in the Quebec national assembly, told a news conference "confusing and discriminatory" clauses in the act had caused current conflicts over language rights in education.

He referred specifically to the plight of Italian students refused admission to Engish-language schools of the Jerome Le Royer School Commission in east-end St. Leonard because of the quota system for English enrolment established by the language law.

who evaded paying taxes on

Under the law, also known as Bill 22, enrolment in a school board's English sector is frozen at last year's level.

However, the law also says that students whose mother tongue is not English may attend English schools if they pass a language proficiency test.

Mail Won't Burn: Mackay

OTTAWA (CP) — Deputy postmaster-general John Mackay denied Wednesday that any deliverable unsealed mail sent after July 1 next year will be destroyed.

His denial came after a spokesman had said that unsealed mail posted after the July deadline would be returned to senders or destroyed if it did not have a return address.

"You have my assurance in blood that deliverable mail will be handled," Mackay said.

The post office is allowing persons mailing greeting cards to begin sending sealed mail at the third-class rate of six cents. Because of automatic sorting machines in the post office, postal officials want to eliminate the use of unsealed mail and open windows in envelopes.

Mackay said the only unsealed mail to be destroyed would be undeliverable third-class mail without a return address. This always is destroyed after a period of time.

Army Buffer Sent To Calm Tripoli

Times News Services

Lebanese Premier Rashid Karami has ordered the army to take up positions between warring Christian and Moslem militias in northern Lebanon.

Karami told the troops Wednesday night to set up a buffer zone across the embattled nine-mile-long road between the mostly Moslem city of Tripoli and the largely Christian town of Zghorta.

About 350 persons have been killed or wounded in a week and a half of religious warfare between Moslems from Tripoli and Christians from Zghorta.

On another front, Israeli planes bombed a Palestinian refugee camp near Tyre today in their third air raid on Lebanon this month, Lebanese witness said.

The raiders struck at the Borghollyyeh camp, scene of a similar raid on Sept. 3, the witnesses said. The camp was also battered by Israeli planes in an attack last month. Casualties were not known immediately.

Israel earlier charged Arab gunners in Lebanon with firing a bazooka rocket at an Israeli patrol near the Lebanese border. No one was reported hurt in that incident.

In political manoeuvring, an Israeli government source in Tel Aviv said negotiations for a new peace agreement with Syria on the Golan Heights may begin in several months, but Syria has not yet signalled a desire to begin talks.

Syrian president Hafexz Assad, however, has launched a new attack on the Israeli-Egyptian peace agreement, vowing Arabs will not surrender a single grain of sand to Israel.

"The question of Palestine is our sacred cause for which the Arab nation sacrificed its dearest sons. It is the axis of our struggle. We shall in no case bargain about it, and we shall permit no one to bargain about it," he said.

Egypt, though, has stopped all radio propaganda broadcasts against Israel.

A Tel Aviv source said the move was apparently connected with the pact, although there is no clause in the public part of the agreement stipulating Egypt must end its anti-Israel propaganda.

Such a provision is believed to be part of the "secret understandings" that Egypt and Israel have undertaken with the United States as part of the accord.

Cowichan Co-Op Mill To Reopen

DUNCAN — The Cowichan co-operative feed mill, which closed eight months ago, will return to production later this month under new management.

George Whittaker, secretary to the board of directors of the co-op, said Wednesday sale of the building and equipment would be completed next week. Names of the new owners were not disclosed.

The 79-year-old feed mill closed with the co-op saying it couldn't meet pay demands of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, which represented 10 employees.

Whittaker said the fate of the co-op association will be decided at the next annual meeting in February.

Molybdenum Price Rises

GREENWICH, Con.. (CP) — Climax Molybdenum Co., a division of Amax Inc., announced ti will increase prices for molybdenum products by six to eight per cent, effective Sept. 29. The company said the increases are "due to rising mining and conversion costs and large expensidture sofr hte development of new mining and manufacturing facilities."

Pre-Schoolers Library Series

Puppets, films and stories will be featured during a six-week pre-school program series which will begin Sept. 17 at the Central Library and two branches of the Greater Victoria Public Library system.

The Wednesday series will continue until Oct. 22. Parents must pre-register their children.

Times and locations for the series are:

—Youth Department, Central Library, 794 Yates, at 11 a.m.

—Saanich-Victoria Branch, 880 Seymour, at 2 p.m.

—Esquimalt Branch, 1153 Esquimalt Road, at 4 p.m.

Dailly Stresses Teacher Training

Education Minister Eileen Dailly said today more in-service training must be made available to teachers in B.C.

Dailly, who has just returned from a United Nations conference on teacher education in Geneva, said teachers must be equipped with more updated knowledge and new techniques "if we are to develop a qualify education system."

On her return to Canada Dailly stopped off in Regina for two days of meetings of the Council of Ministers of Education where she was elected chairman, the first woman to hold the position.

At a press conference this morning she said the council intends to meet with federal officials this November to ask for more financial help in post-secondary programs.

She also said the council will request changes in the Canada Loan Act which would allow part-time students and students on short-term courses to apply for assistance.

U.S. BANKERS HERE

A group of 34 businessmen representing some of the major investment houses in the United States arrived in Victoria Wednesday.

The businessmen, invited to the province by Premier Dave Barrett during his trip last spring to New York City, are guests of B.C. Hydro.

Barrett said the purpose of the trip is to let the group see for themselves the Hydro projects they have been responsible for raising funds for in the U.S. money market.

Barrett addressed the group at a closed dinner Wednesday in the Empress Hotel.

Included in the tour are representatives of the Bank of America Investment Management Co., First Boston Bank, Ford Foundation, U.S. Trust, Wells Fargo Band and several life insurance companies.

The tour ends Friday.

Judge Reserves Decision On $3,000 Loan Papers

Judge Montague Drake reserved decision Wednesday in a county court action brought by Ernest and Bernice Kosowan for payment by Gerald Ackerman of a $3,000 promissory note.

Kosowan told Judge Drake the money was a personal loan to help Ackerman buy a house, but Ackerman said it was an advance on wages while he was employed by Kosowan's company as a construction superintendent.

W. R. Southward, representing Kosowan, said there was no dispute about the note and that it was payable when the roof was completed on a five-storey apartment building at 1235 Johnson.

Ackerman worked there between April and October, 1973, and October, 1973, and admitted he was paid for that time, he said. He was off the job for three months because work stopped at the site, then resumed but left in April ,1974, because he was going to Europe.

Southward said Ackerman left before the final two payments of a $10,000 contract, that he left when work wasn't fully finished on one stage, and that the contract said when he left he wasn't entitled to any more money.

R. K. Bryden, representing Ackerman, said the money was to be repaid from "draws" on the $10,000 contract, that his client worked for Kosowan's company, Casalero Developments, and when he left in April, 1974, work had ground to a halt amidst liens and the building was sold in June to Grossman Holdings of Edmonton.

Ackerman maintained he was paid $8,860 including the $3,000 in question and, Bryden said, Kosowan also thought that amount had been paid because he listed that amount in a government statement. This was later reduced by $3,000 but this was after a statement of defence was filed, he said.

Work didn't halt on the building because of Ackerman's actions but because Kosowan was having disputes with almost every sub-trade.

It was a question of equities, Bryden argued. Kosowan's company had no money or assets and its only source of money was Kosowan.

The company, he said, was purely a shield for creditors. The company was Kosowan and "I don't feel he can stand behind the company and avoid his responsibilities."

Young Grits Add Backing To Anderson

The voice of young Liberals was added Wednesday to support for provincial leader David Anderson, who is expected to be challenged at the party's annual convention in Vancouver Sept. 26-28.

Susan P. Hutchinson, chairman of the youth caucus of the Liberal party in British Columbia, said in a statement she believes in the capacity of the party, led by Anderson, to provide "honest, level-headed, liberal government."

Anderson had always represented "the kind of government that is honest, well-run and appreciative of the needs of all of the citizens of British Columbia.

"David Anderson stands for the kind of government which the young people of this party would like to see. And I know I speak for many of the youth caucus of the Liberal party in B.C. when I state by full support behind David Anderson as our leader," Hutchinson said.

THE LIVING WORLD

AN EVENING COURSE IN BIOLOGY

An understanding of Biology has become central to intelligent living in the twentieth century.

This course is designed for adults who wish to understand important biological concepts but who have little or no previous scientific background. The diversity and unity of living things will be illustrated through lectures, discussions and films on a variety of topics such as ecology, evolution and the world's food supply. Sessions will include demonstrations of pertinent materials and special lectures by guest experts. No laboratory work is required. A reading list will be provided.

Offered through the Division of Continuing Education, University of Victoria by the Department of Biology.

Wednesdays, beginning September 24, 7:30-9:30 p.m.
Fee $30 per Term

YOU CAN'T BEAT Home·made

GOOD

For year-round good eating, home preserving makes a lot of sense. And just think of the economy and convenience of having shelves filled with your own preserves, chutneys, pickles and jam.

Do your Bartlett Pear preserving during the next two to three weeks.

And be sure to treat your family to fresh B.C. Bartletts often during the season – they're luscious, juicy and refreshing as snacks, in salads and desserts, on cereals . . . and great as a lunch box fruit.

B.C. BARTLETT PEARS

RIPENING

If your B.C. Bartletts are not fully ripe when you buy them, simply hold them at room temperature and they'll ripen beautifully without loss of flavour.

PEAR COCONUT DESSERT SQUARES

1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1/4 cup brown sugar
1/3 cup softened butter or margarine
2 eggs
3/4 cup brown sugar
1/4 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
2 cups diced unpeeled fresh B.C. Pears
1-1/3 cups coconut
1/2 cup raisins
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix the 1 cup flour and 1/4 cup sugar. Add butter or margarine; mix until thoroughly blended and smooth. Press firmly into ungreased 9-inch square pan. Bake at 350°F for 20 minutes, or until browned.

Meanwhile, beat eggs until thick and light in colour. Add the 3/4 cup sugar gradually, beating thoroughly. Sift the 1/4 cup flour with the baking powder, salt, and cinnamon; fold into egg mixture. Fold in pears, coconut, raisins, and vanilla. Spread on top of baked mixture in pan. Bake a further 45 minutes approximately, or until coconut is golden brown. Cut into squares while warm. Serve with a lemon sauce if desired. Serves 9.

PICKLED PEARS

2 quarts pears
3 cups granulated sugar
1 cup water
2 cups vinegar
1 piece ginger root
1 stick cinnamon
1 teaspoon whole allspice
1 teaspoon whole cloves

Use only firm, slightly under ripe pears. Pare, halve or quarter and core pears.

Combine sugar, water and vinegar in large kettle. Add spices tied in cheesecloth bag; boil 10 minutes. Add pears, having them one layer deep in the kettle, cook about 3 to 6 minutes, or until pears are barely tender.

Let pears stand in the syrup overnight to absorb the syrup. Carefully pack pears into hot, clean jars. Bring syrup to boil, pour over pears. Seal jars. To ensure good keeping, process in boiling water bath for 5 minutes.

BILTMORE COUPE

1 pint home-canned B.C. Pear halves, chilled
Cinnamon
1 pint vanilla ice cream
Chocolate syrup

Drain pear halves well; sprinkle each half lightly with cinnamon. In parfait glasses, alternate layers of pear and ice cream; pour chocolate syrup over. Serves 6.

PEAR CONSERVE

3 pounds firm ripe B.C. Pears
1 cup undrained, canned, crushed pineapple
5 cups granulated sugar
Red and yellow food colouring, optional

Peel, core, and slice pears; chop finely. Combine with pineapple and sugar in large kettle. Bring to boil; simmer, uncovered, for 20 minutes, or until thick, stirring frequently. Stir in food colouring, if desired. Ladle into hot, sterilized jars; seal. Makes four to five 1/2-pint jars.

PEAR CHUTNEY

3 pounds B.C. Pears, peeled, cored, and chopped
3 tart B.C. apples, peeled, cored, and chopped
2 medium onions, sliced
1 pound raisins
1 teaspoon chili powder
2 – inch piece fresh root ginger, peeled and finely chopped
1 garlic clove, crushed
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
12 whole cloves
2 oranges, juice and grated rind
1 pound light brown sugar
2-1/2 cups white vinegar

Place all ingredients in preserving kettle, mix well. Bring mixture to boil, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat; simmer, stirring occasionally, until mixture is thick, about 3 hours. Ladle into hot, sterilized jars; seal firmly tight.

PEAR GINGERBREAD UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE

1 pint home-canned B.C. Pear halves
1-1/2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 cup light or dark brown sugar
1 package gingerbread mix

Drain pears well. Spread butter over bottom of an 8" x 8" baking pan. Pat down sugar firmly over butter or margarine. Arrange pear halves, cut side down, on top of sugar. Prepare gingerbread according to package instructions; pour batter over pears. Bake according to directions on package. Cool 5 minutes. Turn out onto plate. Serves 6.

LAST MAYNE SHARK DIES QUICK DEATH

VANCOUVER (CP) — The survivor from a group of three six-gilled sharks brought last month to the Vancouver public aquarium died Wednesday, a few hours before it was to be put to death because of its poor condition.

The nine-foot female, called Pussycat, could not orient itself in its tank and was swimming upside down.

The first shark died shortly after being captured by an aquarium expedition and the second about a week later.

Aquarium curator K. G. Hewlett said there will be no further local sharks brought in for some time because there is no space for a major shark pool.

"It's been a real headache for us to take care of them," he said. "Sometimes we've been up all night walking them."

The shark's health deteriorated so quickly that it was impossible to return her to the ocean, he added.

"If we'd put her back when she was in such poor shape it would have been like putting death under the carpet," he said. "She would have been eaten by predators while half alive. She suffered much less in our tank."

TORONTO, Sept. 11 — SEPTEMBER WEEK-ENDS at the cottage, beach or resorts are often the most pleasant of the year. One should be prepared, though . . . changes in food or water . . . even excitement . . . can cause nausea, cramps and diarrhea That's why I make sure to have DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY on hand wherever we are . . . whenever we travel. Effective, yet gentle, Dr. Fowler's works quickly and is non-constipating. Soothing and settling for adults and children, pleasant-tasting Dr. Fowler's has proven effective for over 6 generations of Canadians . . . reason enough to keep Dr. Fowler's Extract on hand at all times!

A YOUNG FRIEND SURPRISED ME the other day when she said, "You know, Mother was right". It seems that she had taken her Mother's advice and tried Dodd's Kidney Pills when a back-ache was making her feel miserable. "Mother says Dodd's Kidney Pills help relieve the urinary irritation that causes back-ache by stimulating kidney action. So I bought a bottle of Dodd's at my neighbourhood drug-store. Since I've been using Dodd's, I sure feel more cheerful. My friends say I look better, too." Small wonder Dodd's Kidney Pills have been used successfully by millions of Canadians for over 70 years!

Prisoner Moved After Attack

A Wilkinson Rd. inmate attacked by two fellow prisoners Monday has been moved to the city jail after his lawyer told provincial court Judge Fred Green the prisoner feared for his life.

Lawyer Dean Wilson asked that John Paul McClarty, 21, of Chetwynd be removed from the provincial jail when he appeared to fix a trial date on a charge of robbing the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 1090 Fort, of $4,000 on Feb. 24.

"There was apparently a hunting knife used," Wilson told Green. "And threats have been made on his life."

But outside court, jail director Hal McGillivary said the attack was not serious, and McClarty suffered only a bloody nose.

"He got into a fight on one of the tiers where he was being held. Apparently he had been gambling with somebody on the tier, and he lost money. They say he didn't pay his debt.

"It appears the inmates wanted to put a scare into him."

It's unlikely a knife was involved, said McGillivary.

"We frisk that place continually. If there's a hunting knife in there I want to know about it."

Young Urges Checks on Scanners

Canadian Press

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young said Wednesday she would like the federal food prices review board to investigate new unit coding procedures being introduced by supermarket chains.

At present only one supermarket in Montreal has unit coding computers linking cash registers with computers. Five, however are planned for the Vancouver area she said.

Under the unit product coding system, canned and packaged goods do not carry the price of the product although the price is listed on the supermarket shelf.

When the system is in effect, the shopper carries the goods to the check-out counter where the tins and packages pass beneath a scanner relaying the electronic code to a computer which will then punch the price through the cash register.

Young said there are five supermarkets in Vancouver which already have the equipment installed.

"Right now the conventional registers are being used," she said, "but eventually the price information would be kept in a computer at the rear of the store instead of the price being marked on the top of the can.

"There will be no price on the can. The consumer will have no idea what the cost of the item is when he or she picks it off the shelf. When it goes through the scanner the scanner merely passes the information through the computer, back to the cash register . . . and that's the first time the consumer knows what the actual price is."

"It's a very expensive system involving computers and some very complicated hardware," she added. "I don't have actual figures but it will be literally in the thousands of dollars per store."

The minister said she would like to know whether the added costs will be passed on to the consumer and what benefits the consumer obtains from the new system.

She said the least the prices review board could do is conduct an in-depth analysis into the proposed system in order to warn the public of its dangers and benefits, if any, to the consumer.

Lid Men Cleared

WASHINGTON (AP) — A seven-week investigation of the home canning jar lid shortage turned up no evidence of industry collusion, the U.S. federal trade commission said Wednesday.

The agency told a House of Representatives small business subcommittee that the country-wide shortage resulted from "unprecedented demand which the industry was unprepared to supply, despite substantial increases in jar-lid production."

The entrance of new jar and lid manufacturers into the market "should minimize the possibility of similar shortages in the future," testified Robert Liedquist, acting director of the FTC's bureau of competition.

The FTC said it found no evidence of collusion between lid manufacturers and commercial food processors to withhold lids from the market.

Dead End Hit On Housing For University

University of Victoria has reached a dead end in its search for student housing financing, UVic president Howard Petch said Wednesday.

The provincial government referred the university to the federal government but Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation has higher priorities than student accommodation and Petch said he's at a loss.

The same bleak picture exists for government assistance in funding badly needed day care centres, he said, and UVic will begin a fund-raising drive to try to cope with those needs.

"We hope to raise a few hundred thousand in the fund drive to build day care centre units as we need them and we hope to receive a favorable response both within the university community and in the community at large," Petch told the first UVic senate meeting of the academic year.

He estimated cost of housing "in excess of millions" and said he feels if UVic borrowed the money through regular channels the rent would be too high for students.

UVic last year asked the Universities Council of B.C. to request money from the provincial government, and while awaiting word looked into a variety of housing possibilities, including logging camp style dormitories, and trailers on campus.

The council was appointed by the provincial government to act as a buffer between universities and the department of education.

While the council said it was "sensitive" to the housing shortage in Vancouver and Victoria, particularly in the decline of low rental accommodation, and was "concerned about the deleterious effects," it felt it was not the responsibility of the education department to finance residences.

The council's position was sent as a resolution to Education Minister Eileen Dailly, with an addendum that any application for funds sent to CMHC would be supported.

And on day care centre financing, the council's resolution was similar:

Although campus child care facilities are important in insuring access to universities to parents, "the council does not recommend that education grants be used for financing of construction."

Petch said UVic has had one day care centre which handles 20 children and renovations of the print shop will accommodate another 20, hopefully next week.

But the waiting list is from 60 to 75 and in some cases, he said, "parents are putting the names of unborn children on the waiting list.

"It affects the careers of both students and faculty," Petch said.

For this year, the housing office on campus reports that most stidents have found a place to live, after frenetic searching, and at the senate meeting Petch thanked the residents of Victoria for responding to a "shameful problem."

In other discussions the president reported that total enrolment this year is 6,792, an increase of 702 over last year.

A Taste of Happiness —It Knows No Limits

Riding down in the elevator yesterday from my dentist's office I was suddenly aware of being disappointed.

It's been a gradual thing, but after a lifetime of it and with dentistry at last in an age of modern, painless science, I've finally got over my fears, even the fears of anticipation, which always were the worst. With it, I'm sorry to say, has gone one of life's finer moments. You win some, as the man said, and you lose some.

It used to be that the ride down was a fine, joyful experience. An ordeal was over. With the tongue busily exploring the new filling, the world would seem a considerably brighter place than it had been when, quaking, you crept in. I don't suppose I ever got out of a dentist's chair without the absolute conviction that I would never have to face it again.

There used to be a good many moments like that, moments of a consciousness of being quite remarkably happy. The last day of school before the summer holidays was one, perhaps the best. Or the feeling when you were going to pick up your girl and wore white flannels. Or the exhilaration of the high dive or pushing off from the start of the ski run with every prospect of making it to the bottom.

It's often said the young accept such happiness lightly, but that's not entirely true. Looking backward I fancy every adult can recall those special situations as a boy or girl when an exaltation was so sharply felt and so savored that it remained in the memory forever, like nuggets shining in a pan of gravel.

So this post-dental reaction set me to wondering if one of the troubles with growing up isn't that you grow away from the big, aching moments of happiness, yet, upon reflection, I've decided that age has its compensations in this way as it does in others.

I was thinking of our move into a house that, to put it mildly, had a great many things wrong with it. It was a struggle to feel that we belonged to the place or it belonged to us. What with the plumbers and electricians and the carpenters and the man who came to bail out the basement and the packing cases piled in every room I'd begun to wonder if things would ever straighten out.

The moment they did, when everything suddenly seemed to fall into place, the moment of looking around and discovering that everything was snug and cheerful and comfortable, produced a feeling of well-being that seldom comes to the very young.

I have had this feeling before, sometimes when I've had two or three passable columns in a row or when I've made the last payment on a possession or when a number of pleasant events happen to coincide — a feeling that things are going pretty well and I ought to pause a second or two and count my blessings. One night, purely by chance, we had calls from all three of our daughters, scattered about the world, each with an announcement of some good news, and I felt like a rich man.

Such moments, I suppose, don't light the big fire of youthful happiness, but they make a respectable warmth. This is the moment of contentment and it may come in a number of forms — a good book (like Saul Bellow's Humboldts Gift) and a tall drink and a warm alder fire will do it. I think now that it's a mellow brew that youth never knows.

The truth seems to be that as we grow older this sense of happiness becomes less selfish. While the young are made happy by things that happen directly to them the mature person may find it in what happens to others.

An achievement by a child, for example, will do it and a baby's first step or first word may become an absorbing experience in joy. This is why the family unit is the happiest of all society's organizations and the real reason why parenthood is constantly rewarding whatever the sacrifices that must be made.

An older person, too, becomes discriminating in his search for that elusive stuff and will retain the memory of a mood or a view or a song in the right. I could list a half a hundred of them — a precise moment in New Orleans on an August night with the muffled beat of Dixieland jazz in Basin Street — caught and held in the memory like a bright butterfly.

Happiness may be any number of such things — a word of encouragement from a man who has been a hero to you, the excitement of anticipation when a fine orchestra tunes up, the moment of being airborne in a plane that will fly through the darkness and bring you into a foreign place on the other side of the night, a mound of corn on the cob and an appetite, the face of a friend who has been away too long, the heartbreaking beauty of an Indian Summer morning.

It makes an impressive total when something as mundane as a visit to the dentist's causes you to add them up.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Who named the U.S. flag the Star-Spangled Banner?—T.R.

A. Francis Scott Key in 1814 when he wote the poem that became the national anthem. William Driver, a sea captain from Salem, Mass., gave it the name Old Glory in 1824, according to World Book Encyclopedia.

Q. Does milk lose any nutritive value if it is frozen? I've noticed that 2 per cent milk becomes watery and somewhat tasteless when frozen.—W.B.

A. The nutritive value of milk remains the same if frozen. But during the freezing process, water becomes separated from the butterfat, milk protein and milk sugar. The reason you have noticed previously frozen milk watery and tasteless is that you haven't shaken up the carton enough after defrosting the milk.

Frank's Back Again

He was handed a 14-day jail term in provincial court today after pleading guilty to causing a disturbance while drunk.

Prosecutor Nick Lang told the court Ellis, 60 and of no fixed address, has served seven terms this year for similar offences.

"You're very attached to penal institutions," said Judge Edmond St. Jorre, "You love being in jail."

At a court appearance Tuesday, St. Jorre noted all Ellis' friends are in jail so he "punished" him by setting him free.

It didn't work.

Pensions Here Early

More than half a million family allowance, old age security and Canada pension cheques are being delivered early this month in Victoria because of the risk of interrupted mail service.

The post office said it had been requested to handle the monthly mailing ahead of schedule — about two weeks for family allowance and three weeks for the others — without being told the reason.

But it was assumed labor problems in the post office department were behind the move, and national health and welfare wanted to avoid hardship for families and individuals in the event of a mail bottleneck later in the month.

Later the post office was assured there would be no interruption of service for the balance of September.

The early mailing makes handling a problem for the Victoria Post office, which normally deals with about one million cheques for the federal and provincial governments each month, including mincome, B.C. medical plan and ICBC.

The 355,000 family allowance cheques handled in this area have either been delivered or are in the works, and 205,000 OAS and Canada pension cheques will be delivered to homes within a day or two.

Decision in Two Weeks On Police Union Fight

The Labor Relations Board is expected to take about two weeks to hand down a ruling on whether the city of Victoria is bound by a collective agreement between the Victoria police board and the city policemen's union.

Watching the decision with keen interest will be all B.C. municipalities with their own municipal police forces, for the central point at issue in this first test of B.C.'s 1974 Police Act is whether a municipality has any fiscal control over the salaries paid to its policemen.

The two-day LRB hearing in Vancouver which ended late Wednesday was requested by the Victoria policemen's union after city council unanimously rejected a contract offer proposed by the police board and accepted by the union membership.

Clifford Watt, one of the lawyers representing the union at the hearing, said today it had called several witnesses including union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden who traced the history of the negotiations leading up to the board's offer; former president Detective Sgt. Lorne Shandley; and police board members John Nichol, Jack Cowan and Jean Watchuk.

Among the city's witnesses was comptroller Mason Sheldrick who testified as to the city's current budget position.

Watt said the key point the Labor Relations Board must determine hinges on interpretation of section 23 (5) of the Police Act, which states: "Unless the council otherwise approves, no board shall make an expenditure, or enter into an agreement to make an expenditure, that is not specified in the board's estimates and approved by the council."

Because the city made provision in its contingency fund for salary increases to policemen and firefighters, the board may decide that this constituted prior aporoval of expenditures by the city.

Meanwhile, in the city's other dispute involving its firefighters, the 10-day period allowed for both sides to agree to an arbitrator was due to expire today with no agreement in sight.

Union president Ross Cameron said it now seems inevitable that Labor Minister Bill King will have to appoint an arbitrator.

End of Tuition Wouldn't End Their Problems

A tuition-free university would be no panacea for low-income students, says a five-member committee in a report to University of Victoria Senate.

The committee, headed by sociologist Dr. Roy Watson, concluded that to make university more accessible to students from low-income families, other things would be needed as well as free tuition.

Tuition is only a small part of the cost of going to university, says the report.

To really remove financial barriers, financial provision for the cost of room and board, clothing, books and transportation would also have to be provided, it said.

Another problem, which arose at the tuition-free City University of New York, could also arise if UVic dropped tuition, it said.

Free tuition encouraged more people to apply for the New York university, so in order to keep enrolment to a manageable number students were selected on the basis of high school grades.

"Poor black and Puerto Rican students were the least able to meet the admission standard and the university was exposed to the charges that it was both elitist and racist."

If UVic dropped tuition fees and other B.C. universities didn't, competition to get into UVic would increase and the chances for "disadvantaged" students gaining entry might even be decreased, said the report.

The greatly increased number of students who would apply for tuition-free university would require a lot more money spent on buildings, teachers, and "the greatly increased ancillary services — remedial teaching, counselling and other supports — which minimally qualified students would require."

Unless this greatly-expanded and very expensive system were implemented, the committee said the present B.C. system of student loans and grants is better than free tuition.

However, it recommends improved administration of the B.C. scheme so students don't have to wait as long to find out if they've got the money they need.

The report was accepted for information by senate Wednesday.

WHY MUST BLIND STUDENTS GO AWAY?

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times' Staff

For three Victoria children, the start of a new school year means a painful separation from home and family.

The three, Blaine Steadman, Oriano Belusic and Geoffrey Jones, are blind or partially-blind and must attend Jericho Hill School, a residential school in Vancouver.

Three years ago, when he was seven, Blaine began attending George Jay elementary school. It was hoped he could adjust to a regular classroom so he wouldn't have to be sent to Vancouver.

Until recently parents of blind children have accepted the fact that their youngster must be sent away to attend school.

Not any more.

A group of Vancouver Island mothers have banded together to convince government that blind children have a right to grow up at home, and that special help they need should be brought to them by means of an itinerant teacher.

The parents' group has had continued support from Isabel Beveridge, administrator of the local Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

"The emotional costs of separation are very hard," said Beveridge.

She knows. Years ago as a partially-blind girl from Alberta, she attended Jericho Hill School herself.

There are other costs, Beveridge said. It costs the government $11,000 a year to keep one child at the residential school.

BEVERIDGE
. . . she knows

And for parents there is the cost of transporting the child back and forth to the school, which for one Tofino family amounts to $200 per month, she said.

The parents' group, representing about 30 families of blind children on Vancouver Island, met with provincial government officials more than a year ago to express their concern.

They were assured that the education department was making $15,988 available annually to each school board for hiring a teacher of visually handicapped children.

The parents were happy to have Griffiths, but are concerned that she doesn't have the kind of professional training in dealing with sight problems that they would like.

The only courses in working with visually handicapped children are given in the United States, they say, and Griffiths has told them she would be willing to take such a course if it were made possible.

Also, the parents don't want a special teacher situated in one school, but an itinerant teacher who would travel from school to school helping visually-impaired children to get along in regular classrooms.

"We recognize that because of the geographic scatter of the children there may not be enough in any one school district to warrant a fulltime teacher," say the parents in a brief.

"However we believe that if teachers were shared by two or more districts and travelled from school to school it would be feasible to provide service for most of the children."

The brief has been sent to government officials, MLAs and school boards.

Provincial government reaction to the brief has been sympathetic, they say.

The Vancouver Island parents will meet Sunday in Nanaimo with John Walsh, superintendent of integrated and supportive service for the education department, and his assistant Frances Fleming, to make their case.

Spicy Chilled Mackerel Starts Meal to Remember

CRAIG CLAIBORNE

DERING HARBOR, Shelter Island, N.Y. — If the meal seems somewhat incongruous in mid-August it could not be faulted from that standpoint of taste.

It began with mackerel caught in front of the house last May; cold sliced smoked pheasant from last November's hunt, and a casserole of wild rice with oysters, the oysters fresh from the waters in front of the house.

The table was that of Jane and Clifton Phalen and the meal had been assembled by special request of dishes we had enjoyed in times past plus a few we knew only by reputation.

Both the mackerel and the pheasant were the bounty of the host and had been kept for several months in a well-stocked freezer in the basement.

Phalen, an avid hunter and fisherman, manages to keep the family larder in generous supply. In fall and winter it is filled with wild duck, pheasant and quail and partridge plus four-footed game.

In spring there is mackerel and, as the summer progresses, weakfish, bluefish and striped bass.

The couple are only a short ferry ride from Greenport, the largest oyster packing facility on Long Island. They have clams for the raking, which, along with local lobster and corn, go into occasional wash-boiler clambakes.

In a large sense they are self-sufficient with a well-tended vegetable garden and a herb garden that is a study in itself.

We will confess that until we sampled Jane Phalen's smoked pheasant some months ago we had also not been all that keen on smoked game. It was she who directed us to our present smoker, which we purchased at the time, a Little Chief, manufactured by Luhr Jensen and Sons.

SMOKED PHEASANT

(If you don't have a pheasant in the freezer, a nice, plump chicken will do.)

2 pheasant weighing about 2¾ pounds each.
3 quarts water.
1½ cups salt.
¾ cup sugar.
4 bay leaves.

1. If the pheasant are frozen, defrost them. Tie the legs together so that they are neatly shaped.

2. Combine the water, salt, sugar, pepper and bay leaves, and stir to dissolve the salt and sugar. Add the pheasant and let them stand in the brine for three hours. Use a weight to make sure no portion of the birds is not immersed in the brine.

3. Remove the pheasant and rinse in cold water. Do not pat dry, but place them on a rack and let them dry in the air.

4. Prepare the smoker as indicated on the manufacturer's instructions. Place the pheasant in the smoker and smoke for three hours.

5. Meanwhile, preheat the oven to 300 degrees.

6. Remove the pheasant from the smoker and bake on a rack in the oven for 45 minutes.

Yield: Eight to 12 servings.

MACKEREL AU VIN BLANC

2 tablespoons oil.
¾ cup thinly sliced carrots.
1½ cups thinly sliced onions.
2 cups dry white wine.
3 tablespoons lemon juice.
3 sprigs fresh parsley.
2 sprigs fresh tarragon.
3 sprigs fresh thyme.
3 whole cloves.
10 peppercorns.
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.
12 tablespoons capers.
Lemon wedges for garnish.

1. Heat the oil in a saucepan and add the carrots and onions. Cook about five minutes or until wilted.

2. Add the wine and lemon juice. Add the parsley, tarragon, thyme, cloves and peppercorns. Cook about 10 minutes.

3. Oil a metal pan large enough to hold the fish in one layer. Arrange the fish skin-side down and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Pour the hot liquid with the solid ingredients over the mackerel and cover closely with foil. Bring to the boil and simmer five to seven minutes. Let cool. Chill thoroughly. Serve sprinkled with capers and use the lemon wedges as a garnish.

Yield: Eight or more servings.

FOOD

By MARY MOORE

She said in her letter that her fingers were tired writing and rewriting the recipe for her friends. Finally in desperation she thought of Mary Moore. The recipe sounded professional and good so we tested it. When the buns came from the oven Don, Maureen's husband, ate four.

That is the best fun of making yeast products: when they come fresh from the oven they are irresistible. These amounts will make 18 lovely fat Chelsea Buns — and your baking reputation too. Our thanks to Lillian H.

CHELSEA BUNS (18)

Topping:
¼ cup butter or margarine
¾ cup light brown sugar (packed)
3 tbsp. corn syrup
¾ cup chopped nuts

Dough:
½ cup milk
½ cup granulated sugar (first amount)
¼ cup shortening or butter
2 tsp. salt
½ cup warm water
1 pkg. granular yeast
2 tsp. sugar (second amount)
1 egg

Filling:
2 tbsp melted butter
½ cup light brown sugar
Cinnamon (see below)
¼ cup chopped nuts
½ cup chopped glace cherries (or drained maraschino — optional)
½ cup raisins

In heavy pot combine all topping ingredients and stir until butter is melted and ingredients are well combined. Spread evenly in bottom of an 8 x 12" pan. Set aside.

To make dough in a small pot scald milk. Add the ½ cup sugar, shortening or butter and salt and stir until sugar dissolves and butter melts. Cool to lukewarm. Measure warm water in a one-cup measure and stir in the 2 teaspoons sugar. Sprinkle package of yeast over, stir and let soak 10 minutes. In large bowl combine the lukewarm milk mixture with the yeast liquid. Add 2 cups of the flour and the egg and stir until smooth. Stir in remaining 1 cup flour thoroughly. (Dough will be slightly sticky.) Turn dough out onto well-floured board and roll to a 12x18" rectangle.

To prepare filling melt butter and brush over surface of dough. Sprinkle brown sugar over dough evenly and press it down with the back of a spoon. Sprinkle entire surface lightly with cinnamon, then sprinkle evenly over it the nuts, cherries (if used) and raisins.

Start rolling dough up like a jelly roll, starting at longest side. Cut into 1" slices with a very sharp knife and arrange cut side up on top of topping in pan. Space them because they will join together as they rise. Let rise 2 hours at room temperature. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 25 minutes. Let cool 2 or 3 minutes only, then loosen with a lifter and turn over and out on rack to cool with caramel topping side up, of course. You may spoon out any topping remaining in pan and spread on top of each bun. NOTE: DO NOT LET THEM SIT IN PAN FOR MORE THAN 3 MINUTES OR CARAMEL WILL STICK TO PAN INSTEAD OF BUNS.

More and more women, and also some men, like to relax with their favorite handicraft. For many this special hobby and pastime is embroidery.

Did you know that there are at least three dozen different crewel and embroidery stitches? None of them is particularly complicated.

With the bilingual Crewel and Embroidery Stitch Chart you will be able to follow practically any embroidery pattern you fancy.

The illustrated chart shows you step-by-step how to execute such decorative stitches as split stitch, satin stitch, star stitch, laidwork stitch, turkey work stitch and many, many more.

With some practice, there is no reason why anyone who can read and follow instructions cannot master these stitches and create a one-of-a-kind piece of handicraft.

With your request please enclose a long (No. 10) self-addressed, stamped envelope and send it to: Reliable Smallwares Co. Inc., 460 McGill Street, Montreal, Quebec. H2Y 2H3. Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

Blood Test Free For All Donors

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBEY: I was pleased when you urged your readers to have their blood pressure checked. I wish you'd have added, "And one way to have it checked absolutely free is to become a blood donor. It's quick and painless, and should you have a disease that shows in your blood sample, you are promptly notified."

I donate blood twice a year And I feel that I'm getting much more than I give.

BLOOD DONOR

DEAR DONOR: God love you. And readers, if you are between 17 and 65, you, too, can become a donor. The only bank in the world that would rather have your blood than your money is the Red Cross Blood Bank!

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. Please don't give me a "try-it, you'll like it" answer because that's not the kind of help I need.

I will be in the eighth grade next year. (I'm a male.) I'll be going to a big public school. The law says that every able-bodied student must take physical education, and that's where my problem comes in.

I hate team sports, and there is no way to get out of baseball, football, etc., in P.E. Don't get me wrong: I like swimming and things like that. I'm not fat, and I do exercise regularly so I tm in good shape. But I detest sports that will make me part of a team.

I don't want a lecture. I want to know how I can get out of team sports.

HATES SPORTS

DEAR HATES: Unless you can persuade your P.E. teacher to allow you to substitute swimming or something you like for baseball, football and sports you dislike, I'm afraid you're stuck. (Look at it this way: Doing something whether you like it or not is a good preparation for life. Don't fight it.)

DEAR ABBY: I was engaged, and the wedding date was set 16 months ago. As the date drew near, I panicked. For some strange reason, marriage frightened me. I was sure I was in love with my fiance, but I just couldn't go through with the wedding.

I had some showers and received some beautiful and expensive shower gifts.

We decided to postpone the wedding. (Our wedding invitations were addressed — but never mailed.)

Now the marriage appears unlikely, although my fiance says that he will wait for as long as I want him to.

The shower gifts are still in their original boxes, and it's doubtful that the people who sent them can take them back now. Also, those I've spoken to said, "Keep it. I can't use it."

Abby, please tell me what I should do at this late date about those shower gifts. I may marry him after all. And I may not.

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: Return the shower gifts. And should you marry the man, decline all offers of another shower.

Parent Self-Help Workshop Slated

The second Parents' Self Help Workshop will start this fall in Garden City United Church Hall at 4054 Carey Road.

The first one, held in the spring at the Y had an overflow of registrations and this one has been expaneded to cover more subjects.

Discussion leader will be psychologist Dr. Larry Dettweiler and one topic will be discussed at each of the eight sessions.

Topics are on being a confident person, your child at home, the father's point of view, mental, physical and emotional growth of children, early and late maturing of children, the child at school, being a confident parent of a teenager and on communication within the family.

The course starts Sept. 25 and will run every Thursday at 7:30 for the next seven weeks.

The fee is $1 and for those needing a babysitter, costs will be reimbursed by the human resources branch.

The workshop was arranged by a committee from the Natural Parent Grouj, Foster Parents Association, Single-Parent Encouragement Program section of human resources in the Capital Region.

Registration may be done through Faith Magwood of the human resources branch at 598-5121.

NUTRITION BUYLINE

QUESTION: What is calcium propionate and why is it used in bakery food?

ANSWER: This is a calcium salt of propionic acid, found widely in natural and processed foods, including the yeast leavened foods — bread and cheese. Calcium propionate inhibits mould growth which would otherwise develop in bread within about three days. It has no effect on staling.

QUESTION: I am weaning my 3½-month-old baby. When can I give solid foods?

ANSWER: The infant becomes capable of handling strained food at about three to four months. Salivary enzyme secretions begin about this age, enabling the infant to taste dry foods as well.

When the teeth erupt at about six months, and the infant starts making chewing movements he is able to take lumpy foods.

QUESTION: Are carbohydrates fattening?

ANSWER: Carbohydrates are not calories. The accumulation of calories, or units of food energy, beyond those which are burned through body function and activity causes the build-up of unnecessary body fat. One doesn't need to cut out carbohydrates to cut down calorie intake. To maintain good health it is necessary to have at least 100 grams of carbohydrate daily. One slice of bread, for example, has only 15 grams.

Those foods to avoid, if trying to reduce, are ones which contain a lot of fat (fatty meats, nuts, cream products). Weight for weight, fats yield more than two times more calories than carbohydrates or protein.

Housewives Revalue Themselves

elizabeth forbes

This is a time of reappraisal concerning the position of women in society. Traditional assumptions and values are being questioned and changed, not only relating to the increased participation of women in the economic work force but also to changing attitudes concerning the position of women within the home. In other words — the housewife.

It's interesting therefore, to look at the story of two housewives over in Worcester, England — Erica and Kirsten Evans — who decided housewives everywhere have a direct effect on inflation because they are the main spenders, and who then set out to do something about it.

They enlisted the help of women from all over Britain. Women, as they said, "who wanted to have a part in building a just society; women who were sick of the constant appeals to their self-interest."

Result? A Housewives' Declaration was written, printed and circulated, not only in the British Isles but in western Europe and on request, to 15 other countries including Vietnam, India, Africa and the West Indies.

I've a copy of that declaration beside me as I write (given to me by Victoria's Miss Mary Hamilton) and I find it worth passing on to you here:

"We Are Grateful that most of us in Britain have enough to eat and to keep us warm and to those whose work makes this possible.

"We Will Tackle today's difficulties as a challenge and not depress others with our grumbling.

"We Will Care about the standard of living and true happiness of families across the world. Have we the right to get richer every year when so many are hungry?

"We Accept that food will cost more everywhere. We are ready to spend less on luxuries. We will shop from need and not from greed or for hoarding and will re-think how much is enough for us.

"We Will Refuse to let the hurts and bitterness or entrenched attitudes of the past shape our future. We will accept honestly our own share of the blame for our present troubles.

"We Will Make new friends, including people of different backgrounds and races. We will put right disagreements with old friends and neighbors starting from our side.

"We Will Think for ourselves about what is right and be ready to stand firm and speak out for it.

"We Will Take On the building of a different world for our children and grandchildren. We know this cannot begin without a change of basic human motives which needs the power of God. It will mean the moral re-armament of our country to free it from greed, hate and fear. We willl start with change in yourselves and in our homes."

Not only did Erica and her sister-in-law Kirsten, a farmer's wife, spearhead the move that resulted in the above declaration, but more recently they assisted in organizing a gathering of more than 2,000 Britons — mostly housewives from all around the British Isles — in London's Royal Festival Hall, to proclaim "some home truths for International Women's Year."

Labor and Conservative supporters, trade unionists of 40 years' service and titled women, immigrants and their white neighbors, young and old were among the 47 speakers (both men and women) at this unusual rally.

Those speakers ranged from last year's president of the National Council of Women to the national secretary of the Salvation Army; from a gold medalist branch chairman of the National Union of Dyers, Bleachers and Textile Workers, to a British Davis Cup winner.

There were speakers from homes that had suffered in the depression and from homes of privilege. The emphasis was not on well-known names but on well-tried experience.

Kirsten and Erica Evans chaired the day-long sessions and reported that 31,000 copies of the their Housewives Declaration had been printed and distributed.

Summing up at the end of that exciting day is best presented in the words of a message to the meeting from Betty Beazley, wife of the Australian Minister for Education.

She said: "In a world increasingly penetrated by ideas which deny the dignity of life and by ideas which falsely value women and undervalue children, it is essential that women see the greatness of their true role.

"That role is to create the conditions for peace, to resist what destroys the conscience and intellect, and to lead society to intelligent creative action."

Both Erica and Kirsten Evans are members of the Moral Re-Armament Movement.

It was quite by accident that Lydia Granby, a Kensington housewife (and not a MRA member) read of them and the Declaration when she was desperately trying to interest housewives in an early-June gathering for International Women's Year, at Festival all, which she had personally rented for the occasion.

She invited them to join her in the undertaking and together they organized the successful day-long event.

Japanese Woven Poly Dumping Investigated

OTTAWA (FP) — The federal department of revenue is launching an investigation into the alleged dumping into Canada of woven polyethylene fabrics originating in Japan.

At the same time, the revenue department has determined that there is sufficient evidence of dumping into Canada of polypropylene and polyethylene rope from Japan and South Korea to warrent an inquiry by the Anti-Dumping Tribunal and the imposition of provincial tariffs.

The Anti-Dumping Tribunal will hold the inquiry in Ottawa starting Oct. 21, with a preliminary hearing to determine procedure on Oct. 14.

The investigation by the revenue department into the alleged dumping of woven polyethylene fabrics originating in Japan is the result of a complaint filed by the Canadian Textiles Institute of Montreal.

The fabrics in question are used in the manufacture of tent flooring and tarpaulins and for bagging materials.

If the department investigation should conclude there is satisfactory evidence of dumping, then the matter would be referred to the Anti-Dumping Tribunal for determination of the extent of the dumping, the extent of injury to the domestic industry, and the level of tariffs, if needed.

In the case of the alleged dumping of the polyethylene and polypropylene rope, the initial departmental investigation was launched in November of 1974 and has now concluded that the twisted ropes from Japan and South Korea are being dumped in significant volumes to warrant an Anti-Dumping tribunal inquiry.

Preliminary tariffs, calculated as the difference between the domestic selling prices of the dumped goods and the estimated selling price in the country of origin, have been imposed from Aug. 25 until the finding of the Anti-Dumping Tribunal inquiry is announced.

Pilot Row to Committee

OTTAWA (CP) — The dispute between aircraft pilots and the government over the use of French in air traffic control has been temporarily defused by sending the matter to a committee

The 14-member committee, made up of representatives of groups involved in the matter, is to produce a report in the "shortest possible time", a transport department statement said Wednesday.

The Canadian Air Line Pilots Association announced a month ago members would stage a 24-hour walkout October 17 if bilingual air traffic control experiments in Quebec were not stopped.

The 2700-member pilots association says English is the working language of international aviation and that introducing another language might be dangerous because pilots might fail to understand ground control instructions.

One of the ground rules of the new committee, the statement said, was that none of the members would talk about the matter publicly until a report was prepared.

Courses Given UVic Credit . . . for Now

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

The University of Victoria will likely give course credit to students attending Vancouver Island's newest community college in Campbell River — but officials are far from happy about the new arrangement.

UVic president Dr. Howard Petch said Wednesay he has reservations about accepting courses from a college that was set up in so much haste it doesn't yet have a principal.

North Island College, one of four community colleges established by the provincial government last May, has 200 prospective students in the Campbell River and Courtenay area, and arrangements are currently being handled by an administrator, Dev Shergill.

Petch said UVic tried to discourage the college from going ahead this year because "it seemed to us that a good deal more time was required to properly establish the college.

"But they persisted and appeared determined to register students.

The UVic administration recommended to senate that only this year's courses be approved for transfer credit and the arrangment be renegotiated at the end of the academic year.

Senate decided to refer the matter to the university standards committee for report.

Petch said he requested outlines of the courses two or three times and the university still hasn't received all of them.

His recommendation to validate courses only for this year came because he felt students were put in a terrible position, he told senate.

Contacted in Campbell River today Shergill said the courses will be fashioned after those given at Douglas College in New Westminster, already approved by the province's three universities for credit.

He said the college — which has no physical location, but operates jointly through three northern Island school districts -- is actively searching for a principal.

Only provincial government directive on whether the college should operate this year, he said, was to "respond to the needs of the people in the area" and 200 inquiries were received from people wanting to study this year.

A spokesman for the education department, however, said he "recommended the college cool it for a year to get organized, but university registrar's themselves had encouraged the college to get its operations underway."

Len O'Neill, co-ordinator of community college development while the colleges were being set up, explained there had been some negative reaction to establishment of the college by Malaspina College in Nanaimo, "which wanted to inherit the whole area.

"It's a pack of academic arrogance the closer you get to it," he added.

APPLES DUMPED

Six tons of apples landed up in the local dump Tuesday.

Macdonalds Consolidated wholesalers dumped the apples after they were rejected by government inspectors as unfit for human consumption.

"They had a disease," Macdonalds manager Bob McMurdo said today. "We don't throw away apples for the fun of it."

The dumping had no connection with the current labor troubles in B.C. supermarkets, he said.

B.C. Financial Report on Way

The mid-year review of B.C.'s finances should be issued during the last two weeks of September, Premier David Barrett said Wednesday.

Normally the review is released in early July but this year there has been a delay because of a change in the accounting procedure, Barrett said.

DECISION

Ottawa, September 2, 1975

The Canadian Radio-Television Commission announces the following decision effective September 2, 1975.

Decision CRTC 75-369

The Commission renews the broadcasting licences for the following cable television undertakings in British Columbia from October 1, 1975 to March 31, 1979 subject to conditions to be specified therein.

The licences will also be subject to the condition that the licensees own, as a minimum, the local head-end, the amplifiers and the drops to houses and apartment buildings in their cable distribution systems.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DALEY—In treasured loving memory of Gordon, our dear son and brother.
Sweet are the memories silently kept,
Of one we loved and will never forget;
No length of time can take away
Our thoughts of you from day to day.
Missing you yet dear son, Mum and Dad.

HODGE — In loving memory of Yvonne, who passed away September 11th, 1973.
As we loved you, so we miss you,
In our memory you are near,
Loved, remembered, longed for always,
Bringing many a silent tear.
Ever remembered by her sister Shirley and family in Vancouver, and parents, brother in London, England.

KANESTER—In loving memory of our father, Augustus Lee, (Okie), who left us Sept. 11, 1974.
So many times we've thought of you in the last year,
And wanted you with us to share the joys you opened our souls to,
To tell you of our understanding.
Always remembered by your son and daughter, Larry and Darlene.

McPHERSON — In memory of a dear friend Jim who passed away September 11th, 1972.
Sunshine fades and shadows fall,
Always remembered by Diane, Boo, Heidi and Scott.

MALENFANT—J. E. A.
Wish we could sit and talk awhile—Bernice.

McPHERSON—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, James McPherson, died 11th September, 1972.
His memory is as dear today,
As in the hour he passed away.
Inserted by his loving wife and daughter, Babs and Marie.

McPHERSON — In memory of a wonderful friend, Jim, who passed away September 11th, 1972.
—Remembered by Irene and Ken Cawdell.

PARRETT — In loving memory of a dear daughter Maud, who passed away Sept. 11, 1974.
A silent thought, a secret fear
Keeps her memory very dear.
Time takes away the edge of grief
But memory turns back every leaf.
—Sadly missed by her mother Mrs. Kirton.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

'Scarbelly' Jailed

NEW YORK — A bandit who left evidence by asking dentists to X-ray his teeth and doctors to examine a scar on his stomach before he robbed them was sentenced to between eight and 16 years imprisonment Wednesday.

Sitlas Deberry, 26, pleaded guilty to robbing 13 doctors and dentists. He entered the plea when told the X-rays taken in each dentists' office would be used as evidence against him. In addition, each physician could identify the suspect by a 10-inch scar on his stomach.

Hugh Russel Purchases Lytle

TORONTO (CP) — Hugh Russel Ltd. one of Canada's leading industrial distribution organizations, has announced that it has completed an agreement to purchase the outstanding shares of Lytle Engineering Specialties Ltd. of Montreal.

Lytle is a leading Canadian distributor of valves and related fittings used by the refining, petro-chemical, hydro-electric and muclear power industries.

Established in 1916, Lytle, which operated warehousing facilities in Dartmouth, N.S., Montreal, Toronto, Sarnia and Winnipeg, had sales of about $15 million in 1974.

In August, Russel announced an agreement to purchase Lacroix Inc., a Quebec-based distributor serving the home building field with 1975 sales estimated at $45 million.

Appeal Court Reinstates Calley Term

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Attorneys for William Calley, disappointed by an appeal court ruling reinstating his original life sentence for his role in the My Lai massacre, say they will take the fight to the U.S. Supreme Court.

After nearly seven months of deliberations, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans Wednesday reinstated Calley's 1971 court martial conviction for killing "not less than 22 Vietnamese civilians."

Calley, the only soldier convicted in connection with My Lai, has been free since November on bond set by Elliott and a parole granted by then Secretary of the Army Howard Callaway. It is virtually certain he will remain free.

Last of 'The Few' Leaves the RAF

WATTISHAM, England — Douglas Hone, only serving surivivor of those of whom Winston Churchill said "never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few," has retired. Hone, 57, a flight lieutenant, was the last pilot in the service who flew in the 1940 Battle of Britain.

WASHINGTON — The skipper of the Finback submarine who let a topless dancer performs on the deck has received a letter of reprimand from the U.S. Navy criticizing him for giving her a farewell kiss on the cheek. The kiss, said the navy in its formal letter of reprimand, "tended to demean the position" of Cmdr. Connally Stevenson as commanding officer of the sub.

MEDIA, Pa. — Former United Mine Workers president Tony Boyle today will be sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of his union rival Jock Yablonski, his wife and daughter five years ago.

WOOD RIVER, Ill. — Mr. and Mrs. John Sheraka planted tomatoes and got marijuana. The Sherakas said they planted 13 tomato plants bought from a mail-order firm that advertised the plants would grow 20 feet high. Mrs. Sheraka said she was watching a television program which showed a marijuana plant, and it looked like the plants in her backyard. A check showed the Sherakas had been growing one tomato and 12 marijuana plants.

CAMBRIDGE, England — Physicist Sir George Paget Thomson, one of the first scientists to realize the feasibility of making an atomic bomb, died at his home Wednesday. He was 83. Thomson won the Nobel Prize for physics in 1937 jointly with Clinton Davisson of the United States for the discovery of the diffraction of electrons by crystals. His father, Prof. Joseph Thomson, had won the Nobel physics prize in 1906 for investigations on how gases conduct electricity.

BUENOS AIRES — Isabel Peron will take a 40-day leave of absence for health reasons and hand over power to Argentine senate president Italo Luder, according to government sources.

LONDON Father Oswald Baker, who has celebrated mass in Latin for 33 years and refuses to stop doing so, has been asked by the Roman Catholic Bishop of Northampton to resign. The Catholic Bishops Conference of England earlier this year called for the end of the old Tridentine Latin ritual. Baker had no comment on the bishop's request.

Sommet Rouge... it has to come of age before we blend it.

The distinctive European taste of Sommet Rouge comes largely from a French hybrid grape now grown in BC's sun-drenched Okanagan Valley. Wine from this rare grape is matured in oak casks in the winery's cellars until it "comes of age". Then, and only then, is it carefully blended with fully aged wine from imported premium California grapes, bottled and corked. The result is a robust, dry red wine that has put Sommet Rouge in heavy demand wherever it is sold.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

As a generalization, when one overbids, he arrives at a poor contract which, in order to be fulfilled, frequently requires taking a gamble. Such was the case in today's deal, which was played in a duplicate game. Our South declarer, however, evidently didn't see the necessity for taking one specific gamble — and it cost him his contract, for the gamble would have turned out successfully.

♦ A J 10 4
♣ A K 3 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

On West's opening spade lead, declarer "automatically" played low from dummy. In so doing, he obtained a guarantee that he would win a spade trick whether East (in theory) played either queen, the ace, or a low spade. East won the trick with the queen, and returned a spade to East's ace. West then made a third spade lead, a club being discarded from dummy as South won the trick with his jack.

Unable to reach dummy to take a diamond finesse, South next cashed the ace of diamonds, and followed up by leading another diamond to East's king. When play had ended, South was down a trick, for all he could make were two club tricks, three diamonds, two hearts, and one spade.

South failed to recognize that he had to try for four diamond tricks to fulfill his contract; and that, to accomplish this, he had to get to dummy to take the diamond finesse. At trick one he should have put up the board's king of spades, hoping that West was leading away from the ace (admittedly East could have had the spade ace, in which case declarer might lose the first five spade tricks).

With the king winning, the nine of diamonds would be led next, and the finesse taken against East's hoped-for king. They would follow the diamond queen, and another successful finesse. A third finesse would then bring in four diamond tricks.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Friday, Sept. 12

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Good progress with work and happy relationships. You find a new friend at work. Good news comes by letter or telephone. Don't make big changes or speak of possibilities, for wisdom dictates delay and silence. Consult with Taurus.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Deception is here and smooth talk may be difficult to see through. Don't be charmed by superficial attractiveness of appearance or slick manners. Give no confidence to anyone. Refuse to take part in an exhaustive form of social life.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be direct, use initiative and go after what you want in a tactful way. You may be favored, given new prestige, more money and authority at work. All activities are backed up by excellent judgment and good forutne. A talk with Sagittarius can be beneficial.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A pleasant surprise early in the day. A conference holds just the promise you hoped for. Do something nice for a member of the family. Don't be aloof to a romantic overture. It could be the start of something wonderful.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Work should go along beautifully and your interest sparked by new opportunity. A contract is renewed. Buy something you want, indulge a fancy to lighten your mood. A trend for beneficial social contacts is in the making.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): This cycle favors educational and serious trends which become more pronounced later. Buckle down to use of a talent, cut social life short, even isolate yourself. Patience works wonders. All works out well, if you follow demands of necessity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't argue with an impatient individual. Conclude the matter as quickly as possible. Go through old collections of letters, bills and other papers to eliminate useless items. Don't make a promise unless necessary. Defer letter writing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The accent is on confidential and behind-the-scenes efforts. You seem lucky in attracting needed help with problems, accumulated work or other matters. Private situations can be surmounted. Aries, Leo and Libra are involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Find time to check up on accounts, payments, collections. Don't go off on extravagant tangents or expect too much in a financial way from others. What you say, write or decide should be carefully pondered. Let things work out naturally.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Retrench a bit and be conservative in dealings with acquaintances and organizations. Carefully screen new people who come into your group. Don't be downhearted over minor delays or obstacles. Stay alert. Be wary mentally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid moves which can invite disfavor. Hold up your end of things in a quiet, impersonal way. The right attitude helps you take care of required obligations. Show wisdom regarding health and diet. Dependents or pets need timely attention.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Caution is required in regard to financial and social matters. Don't expect much in the way of approval, decisions or ideas from others. Give thought to your health. Curtail travelling. Philosophical Sagittarius may be helpful.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY much will depend on your dealings with people — how you handle emotional relationships as well as the impression you make on those who can be vehicles of opportunity. Some changes in personal relationships likely. Success cycles occur in February, June, August and October.

Drugging Clue Sought

RENTON, Wash. (AP) — A $5,000 reward is awaiting any person who is willing to provide information in the drugging of four horses disqualified from a race at the Longacres Race Track here Aug. 20.

The reward is sponsored by the Washington Jockey Club and the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protection Association.

Morrie Alhadeff, president of the Jockey Club, said Wednesday "there is no firm clue" yet in the incident.

PM Mulls Replacement As Turner Quits Politics

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner, often touted as a future prime minister, has quit the federal government to "return to private life."

Prime Minister Trudeau, emerging from a lengthy cabinet meeting, said the resignation "came as a surprise" and he accepted it "with deep regret." He said he had not yet decided on a successor to Turner.

Trudeau said a new finance minister would have to be appointed before the House of Commons convenes next month.

"He will be difficult to replace," Trudeau said.

"I haven't shuffled the cabinet yet so I don't know who the new finance minister will be," Trudeau said.

Turner has been unavailable for comment since the pending resignation was first reported Wednesday. But the prime minister told reporters following a cabinet meeting that Turner's decision was not based on a policy disagreement.

The resignation of the 46-year-old Turner comes at a time of continuing new surges in both unemployment and inflation in the country.

There have been persistent reports of differences within cabinet on economic policies.

Some cabinet colleagues have said Turner wanted to take a more direct, tougher stance on fighting inflation, perhaps even pay and price controls and reports that he might pack up politics were sometimes seen as a way of strengthening his hand in cabinet.

On the other hand, some say, he might simply be anxious to leave politics for a time and take up a new challenge. At 46 he could afford to step aside and build up another reputation while keeping a determined eye on the office which Trudeau shows no signs of vacating at the moment. And any international agency, or even a private law practice, would offer fewer dangers than the politically precarious finance portfolio.

Officials of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) say Turner's resignation will almost certainly leave the fund's key policy committee without a chairman, at least temporarily.

SPACE-AGE SPIES ALONG BORDER

TORONTO (CP) — An array of space-age devices will be installed along both sides of a section of the Canada-United States border next year, forming an electronic security screen 450 miles long.

Purpose of the screen will be to help authorities catch any terrorists trying to reach the Olympic Games in Montreal via the U.S.

A source close to the situation in Washington said a team of customs agents knowwn only as The Group, is mapping out a program "covering everything from traffic to terrorism," to be co-ordinated later with Canadian security plans.

One U.S. customs official said his department is "very reluctant to talk about this thing," and that even he did not know the number or make-up of the group.

He confirmed, however, that radar-scanning light aircraft, turbo-powered helicopters and sonar-fitted patrol boats are in the plans for border security.

U.S. spotter aircraft already are equipped with Vietnam-developed Forward-Looking Infra-Red — for night operations, he added.

He could not confirm that electronic sensors, also designed during the Vietnam conflict to detect movement in remote areas, would be planted along the critical 450-mile stretch from Buffalo, N.Y., to Derby Line, Vt.

"But we use them along the Mexican border and it doesn't stretch the imagination to suppose we'll be using them up there."

Execs Marked For Murder

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Sandra Good, a disciple of jailed mass murderer Charles Manson, said today an "international people's court of retribution" has marked for murder scores of business executives whose firms damage the environment.

Miss Good, 30, is the roommate of Lynette Fromee, another Manson follower who was indicted by a federal grand jury here Wednesday for the attempted assassination of President Ford.

In an interview in her apartment, Miss Good gave The Associated Press a list of about 75 names of persons she said were marked for death. She identified them as executives primarily in the power, lumber, oil, food an chemical industries.

The list did not include the names of six Louisiana, Texas and Georgia businessmen that Miss Good previously had told a reporter would be assassinated.

Miss Good told Bob Ruby of New Orleans radio station WWL in a telephone interview that "assassinations are necessary since people are asking for trouble by hurting the earth and from what they are programming on television."

Miss Good gave The AP a statement saying: "The International Peoples' Court of Retribution is a wave of assassins. It is made up of several thousand people throughout the world who love the earth, the children and their own lives. They have been silently watching executives and chairmen of boards—and their wives — of companies and industries that in any way harm the air, water, earth and wildlife."

She said the wives of executives who are marked for death are being watched.

"They can be assassinated on the golf course," she said.

Asked who the assassins are, she said, "They're underground."

Asked who would order the killings, she said: "They

Woods Meet Hinted

Province in Decline . . . Before Wood Strike

Specualtion abounded today that the provincial government will call a top-level meeting of negotiators for forestry companies and three unions aimed at ending the current contract disputes.

But two union leaders said they are "baffled" by government hints of new moves.

Premier Barrett, questioned as he entered a cabinet meeting this morning, would neither confirm nor deny the speculation. Labor Minister Bill King had no comment.

Barrett said Wednesday he was hopeful "new initiatives" in the dispute could lead to a settlement. But he declined to specify what the moves were or where they originated.

He made that comment after asking reporters to step outside his office for a brief moment while he consulted with King. The labor minister declined comment then saying it was "too delicate at this stage."

Reg Ginn, president of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, said he knew nothing of any meeting.

"We have had no invitation, no correspondence, no communication with the premier or labor minister," he said.

The chief negotiator for the forestry companies, Don Lanskail, was at a meeting this morning of his committee to consider an IWA request for resumption of direct negotiations.

Through a public relations spokesman, he said he knew nothing of a meeting with Barrett and King in Victoria and was planning to leave for Penticton this afternoon to attend the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention.

About 13,000 members of the two pulp and paper unions went on strike July 16 to back proposals for a $1.50 an hour pay hike in a one-year agreement. They turned down $1.55 an hour over two years.

Even before the forest industry strike began, 12 of the 18 major economic indicators in the province were in decline, according to a report released today by the department of economic development.

The report, covering approximately the first half of the year, shows a sharp decline in housing starts, crude oil production, copper shipments, lead shipments, zinc shipments, timber scaling, lumber production and plywood production.

The only real strength in the economy was in coal shpments which totalled 5 million tons for the first half of 1975, up 33 per cent from the same period on 1974.

Retal sales were up 9.2 per cent in a period when inflation rose 11.4 per cent, leaving no real net gain.

Total factory shipments to the end of May was $3 billion, up only fractionally from $2.9 billion in the same period of 1974, for an increase of less than one per cent.

The other three economic indicators to show increases were fish landings up 11.2 per cent, pulp production up 4.5 per cent and paper production, up 1.6 per cent. The increases in pulp and paper came at a time of heavy buying in anticipation of the strike, which began July 15. Lumber production has been affected marginally by the dispute and directly by production curtailments by major forest companies.

The economy is believed to have gone ilnto further decline since the period studied in the present report, as a result of the labor troubles in the forest industry. Fish landings are also expeced to show a sharp drop in later reports because of the strike in August at the peak of the season.

Housing starts across B.C. in May totalled only 7,100, down 36.5 per cent from the 11,184 in the corresponding 1974 period. In the urban areas, housing starts during the first six months totalled 9,575, down 29 per cent from the first half of 1974, according to a preliminary estimate.

Export and import tonnages were down sharply at Vancouver for the first five months of the year. Exports totalled 13.3 million tons, down 19 per cent from 16.4 million tons, while imports reached 2.5 million tons, down 12.2 per cent from 2.8 million tons.

NEWS BRIEFS

Gouging Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 40 persons have complained of price gouging during the labor dispute that has closed 125 Vancouver-area supermarkets, Jackie Watt, a spokeman for the Food Prices Review Board, said Wednesday. Mrs. Watt said there were 30 complaints Tuesday and 10 more on Wednesday. Board inspectors are investigating.

Spelunkers Trapped

GRENOBLE, France (UPI) — Six British cave explorers were trapped today in a "death cave" in the Vercors Mountains by an underground flood that killed two of their French colleagues, police said.

U.K. Train Crash

Soviets Urge N-Ban

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI) — The Soviet Union today proposed a complete ban on nuclear weapons tests to ease world tension, and move in the direction of world disarmament. Soviet Ambassador Yakov Malik relayed the request by presenting a letter to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim this morning asking the nuclear ban be included on the agenda of the 1975 General Assembly session opening Tuesday.

Pollen's Attitude Mellows Toward Municipal Meeting

As an instrument for improving the lot of local governments in this province, the Union of B.C. Municipalities hasn't improved a great deal — in the opinion of Mayor Peter Pollen.

But Victoria's mayor has apparently mellowed and is less inclined to criticize the organization than in years past.

In a telephone interview from Penticton today, where he is attending the UBCM's 72nd annual conference, Pollen said: "It's about the same as it always was, except that after six years (two as an alderman and four as mayor) one starts to look at it though slightly more tolerant eyes."

He said some useful things are accomplished by such conferences, although this year there are again some "rangy-tang" resolutions up for discussion by the delegates.

One, for example, suggested the provincial government set the annual salary scale for council members in each municipality. "That was shot down because of its intrinsic absurdity," Pollen commented.

Pollen said the address to the conference Wednesday by Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer was "so inocuous it was an embarrassment."

Although there are about 100 provincial government representatives at the convention, the mayor obviously doesn't expect much to be achieved either through their formal participation or through informal discussions on the city of Victoria's problems.

"These guys carry the party line so hard and fast that it's rather useless trying to talk to them," he said.

Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer told delegates he is opposed to the terms of an amalgamation resolution endorsed by the UBCM which calls on the provincial government to poll the residents of each community to be included in an amalgamation.

Nanaimo was the latest city to amalgamate with surrounding improvement districts. The amalgamation vote was taken from the entire area rather than the separate communities involved.

Lorimer said persons in areas close to municipal centres want services but they don't want to pay for them and will therefore vote against amalgamation.

MONKEY HIPPIES DRIVE ZOO WILD

CAIRO (UPI) — The case of the hairy monkeys has ended happily at Giza Zoo.

Zoo keepers and a veterinarian could not understand why a pack of monkeys in an outdoor exhibit has ostracized three young male members and later "launched a wild biting and clawing attack on them," the newspaper Al Gomhouria said Wednesday.

They rescued the monkeys and discovered that unlike the others, the victims had unusually long hair.

"On the assumption that this might have stimulated the aggressive behavior in the others, the doctor trimmed the hair and then put them back in the reserve," the newspaper said.

"On their return, the three were accepted by the others in friendly fashion," Al Gomhouria said.

4% RENT CEILING?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Tenants Organization suggested Wednesday that allowable rent increases for 1976 be limited to a maximum of four per cent.

The announcement at a news conference by spokesman Bruce Yorke followed an earlier proposal by the Rental Housing Council of B.C. which wants allowable rent increases to reach 28 per cent after nine months next year and 135.5 per cent within five years.

"Our independent studies show that 10.6 per cent allowable increased for 1975 was excessive of actual cost increases and cannot be justified," he said.

KING MISQUOTED

Due to a typographical omission in early editions of Wednesday's Times, Labor Minister Bill King was incorrectly quoted in a story concerning the forest industry labor dispute.

In the last paragraph of the story King was quoted as saying: "I think the economic test in trade union bargaining should revert to the stage of virtual starvation."

In fact King said "I don't think the economic test . . ." Although the labor minister has made his position clear in the paragraph preceding, the Times regrets having inadvertently misquoted him.

75 Island Pulpworkers on Welfare Rolls

At least 159 families of striking pulp workers are receiving social assistance, nearly half of them on Vancouver Island, Resources Minister Norman Levi said Wednedty.

At a news conference called late in the afternoon, Levi said that were 75 cases in the Island district, which includes Powell River, out of a total caseload of 5,300.

In addition there were 34 in Prince George and 50 in Vancouver. Figures for other areas, such as Prince Rupert which has been heavily hit by the dispute, have not been tallied.

He said the total number of cases represented an "extremely small percentage of all welfare recipients."

Levi said social assistance would be available to anyone in need whether the breadwinner was involved in a labor dispute or not.

"We have to make it abundantly clear that in the final analysis, we are not prepared to allow women and children to starve," he said.

He noted the policy was consistent with that followed by the department since 1970 when Phil Gaglardi was minister of rehabilitation and social improvement.

Then, however, he said, the Social Credit government's intention was to keep secret the fact they were issuing welfare benefits to strikers.

Levi produced a directive sent out June 4, 1970, that instructed regional directors of the department to pass on verbally to district offices the notice authorizing the issuance of food vouchers in situations where the striker was "absolutely destitute."

The directive concluded with a statement that nothing about the policy was to be placed in writing.

Levi said the only difference between the former administration's policy and his own was that "we had the decency and administrative good sense to put our policies in writing."

William Hamilton, president of the Employers Council of B.C., said Wednesday he could not see any justification for such welfare payments except in the most extreme cases of hardship.

There is not a more difficult situation to comment on, he said, but when a labor dispute escalates to a strike or lockout it is "economic warfare."

"The employer as well as the employed is faced with financial hardship" he said.

Mayor Art Phillips of Vancouver said the government's decision to allow the strikers to get welfare if they are destitute "will be difficult to police.

"Because the department (human resources is administratively so bad I have little confidence in their ability to do a proper job.

"It is pretty far-fetched that some of these people are so destitute in a month. What this amounts to is that the government will be bailing them out of personal problems."

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said the situation is "another example of the government's failure to come to grips with labor-management problems in B.C.

Canada Bars Arab Woman Terrorist

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Canadian immigration department Wednesday has made clear that a Palestinian woman involved in two aircraft hijackings may not enter Canada — not even to promote a book.

An immigration department spokesman said the department is so determined about this it sent an alert to ports of entry to watch out for the woman — Leila Khaled — in case she tried to sneak into the country.

Khaled's autobiography has just been published here.

Khaled, a member of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, was invited to Canada by the firm New Canada Press, publishers of her book My People Must Live.

Caroline Perly, president of New Canada Press of Toronto which is publishing Khaled's autobiography, said she has sent a letter to the immigration authorities accusing them of "capitulating to U.S. imperialism and Zionism in the Middle East."

Khaled was captured in London after a shoot-out aboard an Israeli aircraft five years ago. She was freed in exchange for hostages held by other Palestinians.

Before that hijacking she joined others in hijacking a Trans World Airlines Boeing 747 that was eventually destroyed by fire.

Soviets Overtake U.S. in Oil Flow

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union became the world's leading oil-producer in 1974, surpassing the United States for the first time, the U.S. Bureau of Mines notes in a summary of petroleum trends.

The bureau said Soviet production of crude oil and field condensate, a related product, increased nine per cent to 3.4 billion barrels last year.

Meanwhile, U.S. production decreased five per cent to 3.2 billion barrels.

Petroleum demand was dampened by the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo and by steep increases in world oil prices.

Worldwide oil production in 1974 was nearly the same as in 1973 at 20.5 billion barrels, an increase of only 100 million barrels over the previous year.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), whose members include the Arab oil producing-countries which interrupted their deliveries to bring pressure on Israel, saw their annual production slip from 11.3 billion barrels in 1973 to 11.2 billion in 1974.

Europe and Japan, reacting to the embargo and higher prices, substantially reduced their oil imports in 1974.

Europe cut back oil imports by one million barrels a day to 13.7 million; Japan reduced imports by 116,000 barrels a day to 4.81 million barrels daily, and shrank its imports from the Middle East and Indonesia in favor of larger imports from China.

Despite its own embargo-sparked energy conservation, the U.S. saw its crude oil imports increase from 3,244,000 barrels a day in 1973 to 3,474,000 barrels daily in 1974.

Deodorized Drawers!

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — In the beginning, there was the roll-on deodorant, then the spray-on. Now, chemist Tyrone Vigo is looking for a zip-up deodorant.

The research centre tries to find new uses for cotton and other domestic products. among its prized accomplishments is the now-popular permanent press process.

There's no problem finding chemicals that will kill stench-causing bacteria, although there are several other questions, Vigo said.

One is how long the deodorant drawers will keep their guard up.

Mushroom Warning

Don't be tempted by those white mushrooms which appeared around the University of Victoria campus after last month's wet weather, UVic biologist Dr. M. J. Ashwood-Smith has warned.

"Many lepiota naucina are having a field day on our campus and are springing up in joyful profusion," Ashwood-Smith says in a memo to all UVic departments.

This type of mushroom has caused several cases of poisoning in recent years, he says, so unless you're a mushroom expert don't go picking any to eat.

Dead End Hit On Housing For University

University of Victoria has reached a dead end in its search for student housing financing, UVic president Howard Petch said Wednesday.

The provincial government referred the university to the federal government but Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation has higher priorities than student accommodation and Petch said he's at a loss.

The same bleak picture exists for government assistance in funding badly needed day care centres, he said, and UVic will begin a fund-raising drive to try to cope with those needs.

"We hope to raise a few hundred thousand in the fund drive to build day care centre units as we need them and we hope to receive a favorable response both within the university community and in the community at large," Petch told the first UVic senate meeting of the academic year.

He estimated cost of housing "in excess of millions" and said he feels if UVic borrowed the money through regular channels the rent would be too high for students.

UVic last year asked the Universities Council of B.C. to request money from the provincial government, and while awaiting word looked into a variety of housing possibilities, including logging camp style dormitories, and trailers on campus.

The council was appointed by the provincial government to act as a buffer between universities and the department of education.

While the council said it was "sensitive" to the housing shortage in Vancouver and Victoria, particularly in the decline of low rental accommodation, and was "concerned about the deleterious effects," it felt it was not the responsibility of the education department to finance residences.

The council's position was sent as a resolution to Education Minister Eileen Dailly, with an addendum that any application for funds sent to CMHC would be supported.

And on day care centre financing, the council's resolution was similar:

"Although campus child care facilities are important in insuring access to universities to parents, "the council does not, recommend that education grants be used for financing of construction."

Petch said UVic has had one day care centre which handles 20 children and renovations of the print shop will accommodate another 20, hopefully next week.

But the waiting list is from 60 to 75 and in some cases, he said, "parents are putting the name of unborn children on the waiting list.

"It affects the careers of both students and faculty," Petch said.

For this year the housing office on campus reports that most stidents have found a place to live, after frenetic searching, and at the senate meeting Petch thanked the residents of Victoria for responding to a "shameful problem."

In other discussions the president reported that total enrolment this year is 6,792, an increase of 702 over last year.

A Taste of Happiness —It Knows No Limits

Riding down in the elevator yesterday from my dentist's office I was suddenly aware of being disappointed.

It's been a gradual thing, but after a lifetime of it and with dentistry at last in an age of modern, painless science, I've finally got over my fears, even the fears of anticipation, which always were the worst. With it, I'm sorry to say, has gone one of life's finer moments. You win some, as the man said, and you lose some.

It used to be that the ride down was a fine, joyful experience. An ordeal was over. With the tongue busily exploring the new filling, the world would seem a considerably brighter place than it has been when, quaking, you crept in. I don't suppose I ever got out of a dentist's chair without the absolute conviction that I would never have to face it again.

There used to be a good many moments like that, moments of a consciousness of being quite remarkably happy. The last day of school before the summer holidays was one, perhaps the best. Or the feeling when you were going to pick up your girl and wore white flannels. Or the exhilaration of the high dive or pushing off from the start of the ski run with every prospect of making it to the bottom.

It's often said the young accept such happiness lightly, but that's not entirely true. Looking backward I fancy every adult can recall those special situations as a boy or girl when an exaltation was so sharply felt and so savored that it remained in the memory forever, like nuggets shining in a pan of gravel.

So this post-dental reaction set me to wondering if one of the troubles with growing up isn't that you grow away from the big, aching moments of happiness, yet, upon reflection, I've decided that age has its compensations in this way as it does in others.

I was thinking of our move into a house that, to put it mildly, had a great many things wrong with it. It was a struggle to feel that we belonged to the place or it belonged to us. What with the plumbers and electricians and the carpenters and the man who came to bail out the basement and the packing cases piled in every room I'd begun to wonder if things would ever straighten out.

The moment they did, when everything suddenly seemed to fall into place, the moment of looking around and discovering that everything was snug and cheerful and comfortable, produced a feeling of well-being that seldom comes to the very young.

I have had this feeling before, sometimes when I've had two or three passable columns in a row or when I've made the last payment on a possession or when a number of pleasant events happen to coincide — a feeling that things are going pretty well and I ought to pause a second or two and count my blessings. One night, purely by chance, we had calls from all three of our daughters, scattered about the world, each with an announcement of some good news, and I felt like a rich man.

Such moments, I suppose, don't light the big fire of youthful happiness, but they make a respectable warmth. This is the moment of contentment and it may come in a number of forms — a good book (like Saul Bellow's Humboldts Gift) and a tall drink and a warm alder fire will do it. I think now that it's a mellow brew that youth never knows.

The truth seems to be that as we grow older this sense of happiness becomes less selfish. While the young are made happy by things that happen directly to them the mature person may find it in what happens to others.

An achievement by a child, for example, will do it and a baby's first step or first word may become an absorbing experience in joy. This is why the family unit is the happiest of all society's organizations and the real reason why parenthood is constantly rewarding whatever the sacrifices that must be made.

An older person, too, becomes discriminating in his search for that elusive stuff and will retain the memory of a mood or a view or a song in the night. I could list a half a hundred of them — a precise moment in New Orleans on an August night with the muffled beat of Dixieland jazz in Basin Street — caught and held in the memory like a bright butterfly.

Happiness may be any number of such things — a word of encouragement from a man who has been a hero to you, the excitement of anticipation when a fine orchestra tunes up, the moment of being airborne in a plane that will fly through the darkness and bring you into a foreign place on the other side of the night, a mound of corn on the cob and an appetite, the face of a friend who has been away too long, the heartbreaking beauty of an Indian Summer morning.

It makes an impressive total when something as mundane as a visit to the dentist's causes you to add them up.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Who named the U.S. flag the Star-Spangled Banner? — T.R.

A. Francis Scott Key in 1814 when he wote the poem that became the national anthem. William Driver, a sea captain from Salem, Mass., gave it the name Old Glory in 1824, according to World Book Encyclopedia.

Q. Does milk lose any nutritive value if it is frozen? I've noticed that 2 per cent milk becomes watery and somewhat tasteless when frozen. — W.B.

A. The nutritive value of milk remains the same if frozen. But during the freezing process, water becomes separated from the butterfat, milk protein and milk sugar. The reason you have noticed previously frozen milk watery and tasteless is that you haven't shaken up the carton enough after defrosting the milk.

Frank's Back Again

He was handed a 14-day jail term in provincial court today after pleading guilty to causing a disturbance while drunk.

Prosecutor Nick Lang told the court Ellis, 60 and of no fixed address, has served seven terms this year for similar offences.

"You're very attached to penal institutions," said Judge Edmond St. Jorre, "You love being in jail."

At a court appearance Tuesday, St. Jorre noted all Ellis' friends are in jail so he "punished" him by setting him free.

It didn't work.

Pensions Here Early

More than half a million family allowance, old age security and Canada pension cheques are being delivered early this month in Victoria because of the risk of interrupted mail service.

The post office said it had been requested to handle the monthly mailing ahead of schedule — about two weeks for family allowance and three weeks for the others — without being told the reason.

But it was assumed labor problems in the post office department were behind the move, and national health and welfare wanted to avoid hardship for families and individuals in the event of a mail bottleneck later in the month.

Later the post office was assured there would be no interruption of service for the balance of September.

The early mailing makes handling a problem for the Victoria Post office, which normally deals with about one million cheques for the federal and provincial governments each month, including mincome, B.C. medical plan and ICBC.

The 355,000 family allowance cheques handled in this area have either been delivered or are in the works, and 205,000 OAS and Canada pension cheques will be delivered to homes within a day or two.

Decision in Two Weeks On Police Union Fight

The Labor Relations Board is expected to take about two weeks to hand down a ruling on whether the city of Victoria is bound by a collective agreement between the Victoria police board and the city policemen's union.

Watching the decision with keen interest will be all B.C. municipalities with their own municipal police forces, for the central point at issue in this first test of B.C.'s 1974 Police Act is whether a municipality has any fiscal control over the salaries paid to its policemen.

The two-day LRB hearing in Vancouver which ended late Wednesday was requested by the Victoria policemen's union after city council unanimously rejected a contract offer proposed by the police board and accepted by the union membership.

Clifford Watt, one of the lawyers representing the union at the hearing, said today it had called several witnesses including union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden who traced the history of the negotiations leading up to the board's offer; former president Detective Sgt. Lorne Shandley; and police board members John Nichol, Jack Cowan and Jean Watchuk.

Among the city's witnesses was comptroller Mason Sheldrick who testified as to the city's current budget position.

Watt said the key point the Labor Relations Board must determine hinges on interpretation of section 23 (5) of the Police Act, which states: "Unless the council otherwise approves, no board shall make an expenditure, or enter into an agreement to make an expenditure, that is not specified in the board's estimates and approved by the council."

Because the city made provision in its contingency fund for salary increases to policemen and firefighters, the board may decide that this constituted prior approval of expenditures by the city.

Meanwhile, in the city's other dispute involving its firefighters, the 10-day period allowed for both sides to agree to an arbitrator was due to expire today with no agreement in sight.

Union president Ross Cameron said it now seems inevitable that Labor Minister Bill King will have to appoint an arbitrator.

End of Tuition Wouldn't End Their Problems

A tuition-free university would be no panacea for low-income students, says a five-member committee in a report to University of Victoria Senate.

The committee, headed by sociologist Dr. Roy Watson, concluded that to make university more accessible to students from low-income families, other things would be needed as well as free tuition.

Tuition is only a small part of the cost of going to university, says the report.

To really remove financial barriers, financial provision for the cost of room and board, clothing, books and transportation would also have to be provided, it said.

Another problem, which arose at the tuition-free City University of New York, could also arise if UVic dropped tuition, it said.

Free tuition encouraged more people to apply for the New York university, so in order to keep enrolment to a manageable number students were selected on the basis of high school grades.

"Poor black and Puerto Rican students were the least able to meet the admission standard and the university was exposed to the charges that it was both elitist and racist."

If UVic dropped tuition fees and other B.C. universities didn't, competition to get into UVic would increase and the chances for "disadvantaged" students gaining entry might even be decreased, said the report.

The greatly increased number of students who would apply for tuition-free university would require a lot more money spent on buildings, teachers, and "the greatly increased ancillary services — remedial teaching, counselling and other supports — which minimally qualified students would require."

Unless this greatly-expanded and very expensive system were implemented, the committee said the present B.C. system of student loans and grants is better than free tuition.

However, it recommends improved administration of the B.C. scheme so students don't have to wait as long to find out if they've got the money they need.

It also emphasized "the importance of a program of guaranteed summer employment as a major part of financing student education costs."

The report was accepted for information by senate Wednesday.

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

For three Victoria children, the start of a new school year means a painful separation from home and family.

The three, Blaine Steadman, Oriano Belusic and Geoffrey Jones, are blind or partially-blind and must attend Jericho Hill School, a residential school in Vancouver.

Three years ago, when he was seven, Blaine began attending George Jay elementary school. It was hoped he could adjust to a regular classroom so he wouldn't have to be sent to Vancouver.

Until recently parents of blind children have accepted the fact that their youngster must be sent away to attend school.

Not any more.

A group of Vancouver Island mothers have banded together to convince government that blind children have a right to grow up at home, and that special help they need should be brought to them by means of an itinerant teacher.

The parents' group has had continued support from Isabel Beveridge, administrator of the local Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

"The emotional costs of separation are very hard," said Beveridge.

She knows. Years ago as a partially-blind girl from Alberta, she attended Jericho Hill School herself.

There are other costs, Beveridge said. It costs the government $11,000 a year to keep one child at the residential school.

BEVERIDGE
. . . she knows

And for parents there is the cost of transporting the child back and forth to the school, which for one Tofino family amounts to $200 per month, she said.

The parents' group, representing about 30 families of blind children on Vancouver Island, met with provincial government officials more than a year ago to express their concern.

They were assured that the education department was making $15,988 available annually to each school board for hiring a teacher of visually handicapped children.

The parents were happy to have Griffiths, but are concerned that she doesn't have the kind of professional training in dealing with sight problems that they would like.

The only courses in working with visually handicapped children are given in the United States, they say, and Griffiths has told them she would be willing to take such a course if it were made possible.

Also, the parents don't want a special teacher situated in one school, but an itinerant teacher who would travel from school to school helping visually-impaired children to get along in regular classrooms.

"We recognize that because of the geographic scatter of the children there may not be enough in any one school district to warrant a fulltime teacher," say the parents in a brief.

"However we believe that if teachers were shared by two or more districts and travelled from school to school it would be feasible to provide service for most of the children."

The brief has been sent to government officials, MLAs and school boards.

Provincial government reaction to the brief has been sympathetic, they say.

The Vancouver Island parents will meet Sunday in Nanaimo with John Walsh, superintendent of integrated and supportive service for the education department, and his assistant Frances Fleming, to make their case.

Spicy Chilled Mackerel Starts Meal to Remember

CRAIG CLAIBORNE

DERING HARBOR, Shelter Island, N.Y. — If the meal seems somewhat incongruous in mid-August it could not be faulted from that standpoint of taste.

It began with mackerel caught in front of the house last May; cold sliced smoked pheasant from last November's hunt, and a casserole of wild rice with oysters, the oysters fresh from the waters in front of the house.

The table was that of Jane and Clifton Phalen and the meal had been assembled by special request of dishes we had enjoyed in times past plus a few we knew only by reputation.

Both the mackerel and the pheasant were the bounty of the host and had been kept for several months in a well-stocked freezer in the basement.

Phalen, an avid hunter and fisherman, manages to keep the family larder in generous supply. In fall and winter it is filled with wild duck, pheasant and quail and partridge plus four-footed game.

In spring there is mackerel and, as the summer progresses, weakfish, bluefish and striped bass.

The couple are only a short ferry ride from Greenport, the largest oyster packing facility on Long Island. They have clams for the raking, which, along with local lobster and corn, go into occasional wash-boiler clambakes.

In a large sense they are self-sufficient with a well-tended vegetable garden and a herb garden that is a study in itself.

We will confess that until we sampled Jane Phalen's smoked pheasant some months ago we had also not been all that keen on smoked game. It was she who directed us to our present smoker, which we purchased at the time, a Little Chief, manufactured by Luhr Jensen and Sons.

SMOKED PHEASANT

(If you don't have a pheasant in the freezer, a nice, plump chicken will do.)

2 pheasant weighing about 2¾ pounds each.
3 quarts water.
1½ cups salt.
¾ cup sugar.

1. If the pheasant are frozen, defrost them. Tie the legs together so that they are neatly shaped.

2. Combine the water, salt, sugar, pepper and bay leaves, and stir to dissolve the salt and sugar. Add the pheasant and let them stand in the brine for three hours. Use a weight to make sure no portion of the birds is not immersed in the brine.

3. Remove the pheasant and rinse in cold water. Do not pat dry, but place them on a rack and let them dry in the air.

4. Prepare the smoker as indicated on the manufacturer's instructions. Place the pheasant in the smoker and smoke for three hours.

5. Meanwhile, preheat the oven to 300 degrees.

6. Remove the pheasant from the smoker and bake on a rack in the oven for 45 minutes.

Yield: Eight to 12 servings.

MACKEREL AU VIN BLANC

2 tablespoons oil.
¾ cup thinly sliced carrots.
1½ cups thinly sliced onions.
2 cups dry white wine.
3 tablespoons lemon juice.
3 sprigs fresh parsley.
2 sprigs fresh tarragon.
3 sprigs fresh thyme.
3 whole cloves.
10 peppercorns.
4 mackerel, about one and one-qutrter pounds each, filleted but with the skin left on.
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.
12 tablespoons capers.
Lemon wedges for garnish.

1. Heat the oil in a saucepan and add the carrots and onions. Cook about five minutes or until wilted.

2. Add the wine and lemon juice. Add the parsley, tarragon, thyme, cloves and peppercorns. Cook about 10 minutes.

3. Oil a metal pan large enough to hold the fish in one layer. Arrange the fish skin-side down and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Pour the hot liquid with the solid ingredients over the mackerel and cover closely with foil. Bring to the boil and simmer five to seven minutes. Let cool. Chill thoroughly. Serve sprinkled with capers and use the lemon wedges as a garnish.

Yield: Eight or more servings.

FOOD

By MARY MOORE

She said in her letter that her fingers were tired writing and rewriting the recipe for her friends. Finally in desperation she thought of Mary Moore. The recipe sounded professional and good so we tested it. When the buns came from the oven Don, Maureen's husband, ate four.

That is the best fun of making yeast products: when they come fresh from the oven they are irresistible. These amounts will make 18 lovely fat Chelsea Buns — and your baking reputation too. Our thanks to Lillian H.

CHELSEA BUNS (18)

Topping:
¼ cup butter or margarine
¾ cup light brown sugar (packed)
3 tbsp. corn syrup
¾ cup chopped nuts

Dough:
½ cup milk
½ cup granulated sugar (first amount)
¼ cup shortening or butter
2 tsp. salt
½ cup warm water
1 pkg. granular yeast
2 tsp. sugar (second amount)
1 egg

Filling:
2 tbsp melted butter
½ cup light brown sugar
Cinnamon (see below)
¼ cup chopped nuts
½ cup chopped glace cherries (or drained marashino — optional)
½ cup raisins

In heavy pot combine all-topping ingredients and stir until butter is melted and ingredients are well combined. Spread evenly in bottom of an 8 x 12" pan. Set aside.

To make dough in a small pot scald milk. Add the ½ cup sugar, shortening or butter and salt and stir until sugar dissolves and butter melts. Cool to lukewarm. Measure warm water in a one-cup measure and stir in the 2 teaspoons sugar. Sprinkle package of yeast over, stir and let soak 10 minutes. In large bowl combine the lukewarm milk mixture with the yeast liquid. Add 2 cups of the flour and the egg and stir until smooth. Stir in remaining 1 cup flour thoroughly. (Dough will be slightly sticky.) Turn dough out onto well-floured board and roll to a 12x18" rectangle.

To prepare filling melt butter and brush over surface of dough. Sprinkle brown sugar over dough evenly and press it down with the back of a spoon. Sprinkle entire surface lightly with cinnamon, then sprinkle evenly over it the nuts, cherries (if used) and raisins.

Start rolling dough up like a jelly roll, starting at longest side. Cut into 1" slices with a very sharp knife and arrange cut side up on top of topping in pan. Space them because they will join together as they rise. Let rise 2 hours at room temperature. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 25 minutes. Let cool 2 or 3 minutes only, then loosen with a lifter and turn over and out on rack to cool with caramel topping side up, of course. You may spoon out any topping remaining in pan and spread on top of each bun. NOTE: DO NOT LET THEM SIT IN PAN FOR MORE THAN 3 MINUTES OR CARAMEL WILL STICK TO PAN INSTEAD OF BUNS.

More and more women, and also some men, like to relax with their favorite handicraft. For many this special hobby and pastime is embroidery.

Did you know that there are at least three dozen different crewel and embroidery stitches? None of them is particularly complicated.

The illustrated chart shows you step-by-step how to execute such decorative stitches as split stitch, satin stitch, star stitch, laidwork stitch, turkey work stitch and many, many more.

With some practice, there is no reason why anyone who can read and follow instructions cannot master these stitches and create a one-of-a-kind piece of handicraft.

With your request please enclose a long (No. 10) self-addressed, stamped envelope and send it to: Reliable Smallwares Co. Inc., 480 McGill Street, Montreal, Quebec. H2Y 2H3. Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.
